

$4200 Reward!

Can You Tell?

The Shortstory Publishing Company, Boston, Mass., will pay $4,200 in cash prizes, ranging from $100 to $300 each, to those who will tell in writing some unusual experience, thrilling adventure, or fascinating freak of the imagination in a style that will interest the hundreds of thousands of readers of THE BLACK CAT, the unique short-story magazine which has won the title of "The story-telling hit of the century."

This prize competition is open to all, and each story will be judged solely upon its merits without regard to the name or reputation of its writer, but no story will be considered at all unless it is sent strictly in accordance with the printed conditions, which will be mailed free, postage paid, to any one, together with a complete specimen story, and many of the names and addresses, as references, of the men and women in all parts of America who have received over $30,000 cash, for BLACK CAT stories, also information of real value to all who are interested in earning money at home. Send address at once, as the contest closes March 31st. The Shortstory Publishing Co., 64 High-Hartford Street, Boston, Mass.

A POPULAR BEVERAGE

TEA IS DRUNK IN ALMOST ALL COUNTRIES.

Legend Concerning the Origin of the Tea Plant—In Some Places It is Regarded as Food—Peculiar Ways of Preparing It.

How long tea has been used as a beverage no one knows. It was a domestic essential in the kingdoms of the Orient long before it was introduced into Europe, and that was not a few decades ago. To-day it is used as a beverage in nearly all civilized lands, and even barbarians dream over its care-begging properties. A pious legend tells us that Daruma, an Indian saint, was the medium through which the beverage became known to the world. He had renounced all allurement of this life to pass the remainder of his days in meditation and prayer. Many long years he spent in supplication, when one fatal night the evil one possessed his soul and the saint fell asleep to dream of a beautiful woman who had enchanted him. When he awoke he was so humiliated and pained that he drew from his girdle a knife and severed his lazy eyelids from his eyes and cast them from him. What was his amazement to discover the next morning that the lids had disappeared, and in their place two wonderful shrubs were growing—shrubs with dainty leaflets, eyelid-shaped and snowy buds opening to the east! He called it te, and vowed that with its help he would pass the remainder of his days and nights in unbroken meditation.

Tea became known in England about the middle of the seventeenth century, during the latter half of which we find occasional reference to it, but it did not come into general use until the beginning of the eighteenth century. It was first sold in public houses as beer is now, and tapped.

Tea is the national drink in Russia. It is as indispensable in the food of the people as bread and meat, and is taken at all hours of the day. In all the serows of the Russians, tea and vodka seem to be the universal consolation. The first thing in the morning, after luncheon, after dinner, in the evening, the last thing before going to bed, are regular times when everybody takes tea, but there are many who take it at odd intervals between times.

In Morocco the teapoker puts a handful of tea into a teapot, pours on some hot water and pours it off directly. Then as many lumps of sugar as desired are added and the teapot is filled with boiling water. The same tea is brewed two or three times, leaves of wild thyme and fragrant verbena being added. Milk and cream are never used. The host always pours out a cup for himself first and drinks it off before his guests have time to touch theirs. This is to show them that he has no designs against their lives, and that the tea is not poisoned.

Tea is not simply a beverage with Tibetans, but the principal article of food. It is invariably mixed with butter and parched barley, and the leaves are not infrequently eaten. The brick tea is reduced to powder and put into the kettle just before the water boils, and after cooking five minutes salt and soda are added. Sometimes it is partaken of in this stage of the preparation, but usually it is put, through a bamboo strainer, into a tea churn, with a little barley meal, and churned vigorously for two or three minutes; then it is poured into earthen or metal teapots and is ready to be drunk.

The Dutch drink tea in the evening two hours after dinner. The brazier with the boiling kettle is brought into the drawing-room and placed beside the mistress of the house, and the tea tray with every appliance on it is set before her. It is served with small cakes, like our afternoon tea.

KRAPOTKIN IN THE SOLITARY.

A Description of the Prison Room in Which He Was Confined.

My first movement was to approach the window, which was placed so high that I could hardly reach it with my lifted hand. It was a broad, low opening, cut in a wall five feet thick and protected by an iron grating and a double iron window frame, relates Prince Krapotkin. At a distance of a dozen yards from this window I saw the outer wall of the fortress, a piece of masonry of immense thickness, on the roof of which I could make out a gray sentry box. Only by looking upward could I perceive a bit of the sky, which was now faintly illuminated by the last rays of the sun.

I made a minute inspection of the room, where I had now to spend no one could say how many years. From the position of the high chimney of the mint I guessed that I was in the southwest corner of the fortress, in a bastion overlooking the Neva. This room of mine was a casement destined for a big gun and the window was an embrasure. Sun rays might never penetrate it; even in summer they must be lost by the thickness of the wall. It was eleven steps from one corner to the other of the room, which held an iron bed, a little oak table and an oak stool. The floor was covered with painted felt and the walls with yellow paper. However, in order to deaden the sounds, the paper was not put on the wall itself; it was painted over canvas and behind the canvas I discovered a wire grating, behind which was a layer of felt. Only beyond the felt could I reach the stone wall.

At the inner side of the room there was a washstand and a thick door, in which I made out a locked opening to pass the food through and a little slit, protected by glass and a shutter from the outside. This was the "Judas" through which the prisoner could be spied upon at every moment. The sentry who stood in the passage frequently lifted the little shutter and looked inside, his boots squeaking as he crept toward the door. I tried to speak to him. Then the eye which I could see through the slit assumed an expression of terror and the shutter was immediately let down, only to be opened furtively a minute or two later. But I could get no word of reply from the sentry.

Absolute silence reigned all round, no sounds came from anywhere. I dragged my stool to the window and looked upon the bit of sky I could see. I tried to catch any sound from the Neva or from the town on the opposite side of the river, but I could catch none.—Atlantic Monthly.

Recent investigations prove that eighty-three per cent. of all the ocean floor lies further down than one thousand fathoms, or one mile below the surface; twenty-one per cent. lies between one and two miles; fifty per cent. lies between two and three miles, and seven per cent. is known to lie further down than three miles.

It is reported from Sierra Leone that those who are engaged in investigating the mosquito theory of malaria in that district poured a dram of kerosene oil, as an experiment, upon a puddle about a square yard in area, floating on which were numbers of Anopheles larvae, with the result that after six hours all the larvae were found to be dead.

Glimmering phosphorescent lights play an important part in the activities and strategies going on in the deep sea. Phosphorescent organs appear sometimes to act as bull's-eye lanterns to enable the monsters possessing them to pick up food in their midnight underworld, and at other times serve as a lure or a warning to other species.

Lake Chelan, in the State of Washington, just east of the Cascade range of mountains, was recently the scene of a strange disturbance. Without warning, the water in the center of the lake, which is some forty miles long and three or four broad, rose to a height of fifteen feet. Immense waves rolled upon the shores, and a large creek emptying into the lake ran dry for three hours. There is an Indian tradition of a volcanic crater having once existed in the neighborhood of the lake.

There is already talk in England of developing the natural resources of the Sudan through scientific exploration. Immense forests line the banks of the Blue Nile along its upper reaches, extending to the Abyssinian frontier. The ebony-tree is met with along that river and also near the Sobat. On the White Nile the India-rubber creeper, a valuable source of rubber, abounds. There are large forests in the Bahr-el-Ghazal province. Gold was once mined in some of the mountains of the Sudan. Search will be made for coal.

Dr. R. Hauthal, an Argentine savant, has put forward a startling theory concerning the remains of gigantic sloths, related to the great megatherium and the mylodon, recently found in Patagonia. In his opinion, these animals, whose race is now extinct, were kept in a domesticated state by the prehistoric inhabitants of Patagonia. A cave at Ultima Esperanza, where many indications of the former presence of the huge sloths have been found, is regarded by Doctor Hauthal as having been used by the ancient Patagonians as a stable for the beasts.

The marvellous effects that are sometimes produced by music may eventually receive a scientific explanation. In a recent lecture at Oxford University, Professor McKendrick said that, while the intricate connections of the auditory nerves are only just being unravelled, it is probable that the roots of those nerves are more widely distributed and have more extensive connections than those of any other nerves in the human body. Researches on the auditory nerves indicate that there is scarcely a function of the body which may not be affected by the pulsations and harmonic combinations of musical tones.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.
