The people of our quiet little town were made to feel very sad by the sudden death of Mrs. Whitney, wife of ex-Postmaster M. T. Whitney. She died between 2 and 3 o'clock, Saturday morning, June 9. She awoke Mr. Whitney about 2 o'clock by saying that she felt "very queer," and began to choke up at once, and soon became unconscious. Mr. Whitney worked with all his might to resuscitate her, and apparently succeeded, but only for a few minutes, when she choked up again. All was done for her that Mr. Whitney and the neighbor women who came in knew would be likely to revive her, but all their efforts proved to be futile. Telegrams were sent to Ira Whitney, who was attending the O. A. C. at Corvallis, and to his sister Neva, who is at the Moumouth collage, and they both came on the evening train. It is indeed a hard blow to the family, and not on the family only, but on the whole community. She was so kind to all with whom she came in contact. She was an efficient nurse in case of sickness, and seemed to know just what to do to relieve the suffering or distressed. She always had a smile and a kind word for all around her, and ruled her household with kindness. None knew her but to respect and love her, and a kindly remembrance of her will be cherished for many years to come by her neighbors, and our hearts are deeply stirred with sympathy for
