Danger of Burial Alive.
 Every now and then a sensation is started by ignorant or mischievous persons about the possibility of people being buried alive, and there has recently been some foolish talk of organizing a society whose members will insist on the use of certain tests in the future. These would include two or more incisions in an artery; exposure of the palm of the hand to the flame of a candle; holding a mirror or crystal to the mouth for a sign of respiration; the use of a hot iron on the flesh without production of a blister; mortuary chapels for retaining the body until signs of decomposition occur. The last-mentioned test, says the new York Tribune, ought to be sufficient without the others, but the test might be extended by the use of the medical thermometer, which alone would be almost infallible. But experts who are in a position to judge, and whose opinions are of infinitely greater value than any one else's, pronounce the sensational stories that are being circulated about revival after burial absolutely false. The fact is, the combined education and practical experience of a physician count for more than most people suppose. Medical science has not yet banished all physical ills, and still has many problems to struggle with, but if it cannot always avert death it can at least recognize it. In a recent issue the Philadelphia Medical Journal remarked: "We have no knowledge of a well-authenticated case of live burial, and believe that the probability of such an occurrence is infinitesimal. Even putting aside the objections of the so-called dead person, there would be the physician and other attendants to be deceived before such a burial were possible. Moreover, there is no trance-like state known to science that thus simulates death. We commend all timid neuroasthenics to soothe their nerves, and if they need a positive guarantee that they will not be buried alive, let them direct their bodies to be cremated. This is both sure prevention and good hygiene."

ENDURED DEATH'S AGONIES.
 Only a roaring fire enabled J. M. Garretson of San Antonio, Tex., to lie down when attacked by asthma, from which he suffered for years. He writes his misery was often so great that it seemed he endured the agonies of death; but Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption wholly cured him. This marvelous medicine is the only known cure for asthma as well as consumption, coughs and colds, and all throat, chest and lung troubles. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at O. O. Krogstad's drug store.

EDITOR'S AWFUL PLIGHT.

Lincoln, whose name Mr. Bryan invokes in his crusade against imperialism, was himself accused of being an imperialist. A few days before the election of 1864 the Indianapolis Sentinel, then, as now, a staunch Democratic paper, said: "Should Mr. Lincoln be re-elected the revolution will be accomplished. This will be no longer a republic of the United States, but a consolidated empire. Every safeguard must sooner or later give way. The limitations of the executive power will not be in the Constitution, but in the pleasure of the President. We implore patriotic and intelligent men to pause and reflect and give their verdict on Tuesday next. If the people will not save their priceless Constitution and Union, it is lost." The old files of some of the daily newspapers are camping on Mr. Bryan's trail in this campaign.
