Portland's baseball team has been giving Oregon a bad name down in California. It should tackle ping-pong.

The numerous strikes prove the oft-repeated assertion that the country is enjoying unusual prosperity. Men don't go on a strike when there is no demand for labor.

John McAneny, a New York city athlete, choked to death a few days ago while eating a beefsteak. The butcher is evidently still at large, there being no report of his arrest and conviction.

To an unprejudiced observer it appears at times that a few prominent citizens and newspapers of the Second Oregon Congressional district are inclined to meddle with the approaching convention in the First.

In the Marion county primaries Tuesday Claud Gatch captured to majority of the delegates over Frank Davey and will be that county's candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress. However, it still looks like Hermann.

Ex-Senator Henry W. Corbett died at his home in Portland Tuesday morning in his 76th year. Mr. Corbett has figured prominently in Oregon's history since his arrival from New York in 1851. He accumulated a large fortune and was noted for his generosity and public-spiritedness.

The good people of Portland have been entertaining brave old Admiral Schley. (Everybody knows Schley.) The Admiral said to a reporter: "Why should my views on politics be of interest. I wouldn't know a politic if I saw one." He evidently intends to steer clear of the breakers which caused Admiral Dewey some little embarrassment and loss of prestige.
