

Lincoln County Leader.

Rev. E. A. Bristol

Mrs. J. T. Vincent.
Mrs. J. T. Vincent, Saturday, October 10, 1903, age 67 years, 8 months and 19 days.
Judith T. Stephens was born in Steuben, Maine, on January 21, 1835. She went to Wisconsin in early life and there she was married to Dr. H. W. Vincent in 1865. Nine years later they came to Oregon, making Corvallis their home, at which place they assumed the management of the New England hotel, now known as the Farmers' house. In 1883, accompanied by her husband and family, she came to Yaquina bay, where for a time she engaged in the mercantile and sawmill business, being one of the pioneers of the sawmill industry in the Yaquina bay country. In 1885 she returned to Corvallis and again engaged in the hotel business. From there she came to Toledo, which place has ever since been her home.
Mrs. Vincent was one of God's noble women, and her many acts of kindness and charity are known in every household in the community where she lived. She was an energetic business woman and aided liberally all enterprises that tended toward the development of Lincoln county.
She had been a constant sufferer for two years, during all of which she was unable to leave her bed. Death came to her relief and she passed quietly away on Saturday morning, at 10 o'clock, leaving a husband, Dr. H. W. Vincent, and three children, Dr. F. W. Vincent of Pendleton, Frank Vincent of Silt Lake and Mrs. Lee Wade of Toledo, to mourn their loss.
The funeral service, under the charge of Rev. F. O. Jones, was held in the Episcopal church Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. The church was filled with relatives and friends anxious to pay the last tribute of respect to the dead. Interment took place in the Toledo cemetery, on a small knoll beside the graves of her father and mother, overlooking the beautiful and winding Yaquina bay and almost within sight of the one she loved. Under the darkening sky of an Autumn Sunday the last rites were performed "ere she was taken from earthly eyes forever."

Sheriff Ross returned Tuesday from Roots postoffice in the Siletz country, having in charge Mrs. Catherine Wolveliski, who was reported by her husband to be insane. Dr. Wetmore examined the woman and refused to endorse the husband's opinion. He told County Judge Brown that her husband had been threatening for several months to send her to the insane asylum, and it was the belief that he was about to carry out his threat that led her to attempt to take her own life last June—an incident with which readers are familiar. From the best evidence obtainable, Wolveliski is considerable of a brute, but his affection for her 5 children makes her willing to endure his harsh treatment. She at times seems to be mentally unbalanced.
We are requested to extend to the people of this vicinity the thanks of Adams and wife, the dentists who recently came here and by their services relieved so much pain and distress. This place has been badly in need of dental service and it is to be hoped that the doctors have met with such success as will assure the people of Toledo that they will make annual stops here for years to come. They leave in the afternoon, but have promised to return next summer.
Herrick, superintendent of the factory plant at Winant, was in the city Wednesday. He informs that they are paying 12½ cents for oysters, and that there has been an increase in the supply of salmon since the raise in price.
Miss Mamie Wakefield, department manager of the Women's Relief Corps, came down from Eddyville Tuesday to attend a meeting of the local chapter, returning next morning.

How About Your Eyes.
Next week, Tuesday and Wednesday, only, Dr. Lowe, the oculo-optician of Eugene, Or., who was in Toledo last week, will be with us again at the Parker House. As he will not be back next summer, do not fail to have tested your eyes for glasses. Consideration free.

The best—ever and ever the best—Dr. Lowe's glasses.

Mrs. B. F. Swope was a visitor from Newport Monday.

John Savage of Siletz was transacting business in the city Wednesday.

Mrs. M. L. Glass and daughter left Monday morning for a visit at Eugene.

Uncle Jimmie McDonald of Chitwood camped in the county seat Monday night.

Miss Mollie Welch of Yaquina was among the passengers from the valley Monday evening.

M. L. Glass is now sole owner and proprietor of the Water Front saloon, Tony Jacobson having retired.

Owen Graves and bride of Newport were among the passengers returning from the valley Wednesday night.

Wm. Enos and family have moved into Thiel Hall, which they are fitting up for a restaurant and lodging house.

Mrs. N. F. Edwards, who had been visiting her sister, Mrs. C. H. Young, returned Monday to her home at Nortons.

Merchant Vant has been listed with the sick during the past week. Jim Gaitner has been representing him in the store.

Have Dr. Lowe cure your headaches by removing the cause with a pair of his superior glasses. At the Parker House October 20 and 21.

S. G. Irvin of Newport pressed homeward Monday evening from Salem, where he attended the annual synod of the Presbyterian church.

Assessor Henry Howell made a flying trip over to Beaver creek Monday, returning with Mrs. Howell. They will reside in Toledo this winter.

Mrs. J. Blaser and daughter Jennie of Yaquina passed through Monday on their way to Albany, where Miss Jennie will attend the Sisters' school.

Rev. and Mrs. E. A. Bristol arrived Wednesday evening and are now at home in the M. E. parsonage. They were stationed at Falls City during the past year.

Rev. Dr. Townsend, who left the bay about five years ago, was a passenger Monday evening for Newport. He was greeted by many old friends while the train stopped at Toledo.

Express Messenger William Toner and family returned Tuesday evening from a week's absence in the valley. Mr. Toner and son Albert had a successful interview with the China pheasants.

Mrs. C. G. Copeland returned last Friday evening from a business trip to Portland. She visited with her son, George Chambers, until Monday morning, when she proceeded to her home at Siletz.

Mrs. J. H. Ross returned last Friday evening from a three-months' visit at the home of her father at Los Angeles, Calif. Her father has been seriously ill for several months, but is gradually recovering. Miss Verna will remain in Los Angeles this winter and continue the study of music.

"There She Blows!"
Our salmon fishermen have been more or less uneasy during the past week owing to the presence in the bay of a blackfish—a small edition of the whale—but up to date the fish has neither swallowed any of the boys nor upset their boats. Tuesday Fred Stanton, Ade Croeno and George McCaulou went out in a smallboat to slay the monster. They were armed with all kinds of artillery including rifles, revolvers and empty beer bottles—that is, the latter were empty in due time. They couldn't find the fish, but shot the bay full of holes where they thought he might be hiding. They tried to coax him to the surface with nice fat oysters, which were kindly donated for the good of the cause by Commissioner George King of Winant. The scheme failed to work, however, and the hunters ate the oysters—a peck or two. The fish again made his appearance Tuesday night and nearly ran over some of the fishermen. He has been seen in the bay at a point about south of Toledo. These fish are seldom seen in the bay, and never before so far from the ocean. The estimated length of the present visitor is 20 to 30 feet. His speed when traveling near the surface with his hump sticking out is said to be hair-raising.

A TOLEDO BOY IN JAPAN.

The Clean and Beautiful City of Tokio—Jack Ashore.

Shedd Rosebrook of this city, who is a musician on the battleship Wisconsin, gives the following interesting description of Tokio, the capital of Japan, in a letter to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Austin Rosebrook, under date of September 21, 1903:

"The street upon which the Tokio depot faces is so crowded with oxcarts and freight vehicles of various kinds that it is with some difficulty you are able to cross, and the clatter of wooden shoes is almost deafening. You are surrounded by a clamoring throng of 'rikisha' men and handed a piece of paper, on which is written in English and Japanese the various points of interest about the city. Naturally, you select the Mikado's Palace, which you indicate upon the slip. As you proceed along the streets (which are kept in excellent condition) your human horse will turn in the shafts and point out the various buildings, theaters, consulates, temples and churches, the names of which he has learned only to make himself agreeable and polite to his passengers. After half an hour's ride through a labyrinth of streets you arrive at the park or garden where the capitol buildings are located. Miniature lakes and fountains seem to be the characteristic feature of embellishment in all Japanese parks and gardens, all of which are liberally stocked with goldfish. This park is at the rear of the capitol buildings, which face on a broad and well macadamized avenue, either side of which is lined with beautiful shade trees. This avenue terminates at the gate through the wall which surrounds the public park before the Mikado's garden.

"The palace of the Mikado is most sacredly guarded, and an entrance to it could not be easily forced by invaders. It is surrounded by a double set of walls and moats. The first incloses a garden or park, which is open to the public, but which can be closed at any time against invasion. You cross this moat, pass through the gate, and find yourself in a large, triangular court. To proceed it is necessary to go through another gate, where you are confronted by a broad expanse of clover lawn surrounded by a stone wall 20 feet high. This lawn is known as the 'outer garden,' and is intended as a protection as well as a rendezvous for troops in time of siege. Inside of this inclosure, upon a slight elevation, and surrounded by yet another wall and moat, in sacred privacy, is the palace and garden of his highness, the entrance to which is guarded by heavily bolted doors, before which stands a corporal's guard. At intervals along the top of the wall are watch towers which command a view of an immense radius. A beautiful stone bridge crosses the moat to the palace gate.

"On occasion of the Mikado's passing along the street in his royal conveyance no one is allowed to look upon him from windows from a higher elevation than he himself is. As his carriage proceeds children may climb telegraph poles to get a better view, but are immediately brought to the ground, and people who assemble at windows and on balconies are ordered inside their houses.

"Aboard ship we have a 'field day' on Saturday to prepare for inspection Sunday. In Tokio they have a 'field day' on Friday to prepare for inspection Saturday. Should you visit Tokio on Friday you would find 'all hands' busy 'cleaning house,' and all the shops are more or less in a state of turmoil. Every Saturday sanitary officers make rigid inspections of these districts, and in places where the state of cleanliness does not conform with the letter of the law, offenders are punished by heavy fines.

"Not forgetting that there are other places of interest, you look at the card which the 'rikisha' man is continually presenting, and select for your next visit the temples, which are about two miles from the Mikado's Palace.

"After passing numerous shops and crossing several canals and streams the streets widen and you soon find yourself in the residence portion of the city. With an occasional vacant interval on either side of the streets are stone walls about ten feet high which inclose the residences. The sidewalks are quite narrow, and between them and the street are sanitary drains. These are kept clean on the regular Friday 'field day' by the women and children. Within the inclosures will be found the same cleanly state which prevails throughout the city.

"The wall surrounding the temple garden is soon reached, the entrance to which would be very difficult to find, owing to the dense growth of trees and shrubbery both before and behind it. The inclosure is divided into smaller courts, where children will be found performing acrobatic feats of all kinds under a teacher. Within the walls are several temples, each devoted to a different branch of worship, the most prominent of which is the Temple of Gold Lacquer. This temple is almost obscured from view by a dense growth of shrubbery. The temple is built of black mahogany and its architecture is grand and embellished with hand-carved figures of artistic and symbolical design. On either side of the corridor are constructed vaults that contain sacred manuscripts of parchment. The nave is about 50 feet square and the walls are something over 20 feet high. The altar is built of highly polished black marble inlaid with gold, on either side of which are trees made of pure gold. Gold is manifest throughout the entire interior. The immense pillars which support the heavy tile roof are made of black marble inlaid with gold. The floor is also of highly polished black marble. Incense burns before the altar continually. Upon leaving the temple you are supposed to leave your pittance.

"Now, from this short note, do not conclude that the Mikado's Palace and the Temple of Gold Lacquer are the only things to be seen in Tokio, for it has a good deal over a million inhabitants. But liberty is up, and I must return aboard ship."
