

To the Public:

We wish to inform the people of Lincoln county that we are located in Toledo with a general stock of hardware and such articles as the farmer, sawmill man, fisherman, carpenter, logger, or, in fact, anybody—or his wife—may need in our line. We show also a full line of plows, cultivators and harrows. We will be glad to have you call and see us before purchasing.

Remember, we are the only exclusive hardware firm in the county.

Old and Young.

It was nine o'clock in the evening—the night of the great dance in the assembly room.

She was almost ready. A few final touches, a little readjustment before the mirror, and then, beautiful and stately, she stepped out in the hall and slowly descended the stairs.

She was very young. But her calm, serious face, her ease and perfect poise, and other certain little gestures of surety in herself, indicated that she was not new at the business of the evening. Somehow there was a touch of sadness to her face.

As she passed down the stairs, she paused in front of the library, with her party wrap over her arm. In the library, her face shaded from the evening lamp, sat an old woman. Her silver hair was smoothed back from a forehead that time had not spared from wrinkles.

She looked up from the book she was reading with a bright smile.

"Off again, my dear," she said.

"Yes, grandma, it's another dance. I had to go. But it's so tiresome."

She sat down wearily, and gazed for a moment absently into the flickering fire on the hearth. There was a brief silence.

Then the old woman spoke again.

"My dear, you do not seem yourself tonight. Of what are you thinking?"

Her granddaughter looked up.

"Of the past," she said, with a sigh. And then she said, as she rose and gathered up her wrap:

"But, granny, you seem unusually cheerful tonight. Of what, pray, are you thinking?"

And the old woman replied:

"My dear, I was thinking of the future."—Tom Masson, in The Twentieth Century Home.

OLIVER ALTREE.

In the Boer war one of the columns, half Canadian and half regular, under General Ian Hamilton, became so notorious for looting that the soldiers were nicknamed "The Thousand Thieves." General Hamilton reviewed them one day in a small village near Bloemfontein, says the New York Times, for the purpose of warning them against any future depredations.

The column had just drawn up and was waiting for Hamilton to begin the review when a ragged rooster ran out from a hut and across the front of the line. A kind of shiver ran through the volunteers. Suddenly a private left the ranks and took after the rooster.

"Halt!" shouted Hamilton.

The soldier ran on. He shortly overtook the rooster and turned back, wringing the neck of the fowl. As he passed the general he noted the fierce scowl on his face. The soldier was an Irish boy from Toronto and not easily daunted, but this time he temporized. Throwing the defunct rooster at the general's feet, he said:

"There, now; I'll tache ye t' halt when the general says so!"

History records that the column laughed and the general smiled. Also that the soldier got only two days in "quod" for one of the most barefaced breaches of discipline in the records of the most irregular corps in the army.

Eggs away up in price, and here your hens are moping about, sickly and non-productive, all for the want of some of Pratt's world renowned poultry powder, which will start hens laying in a week's time. For sale by Krogstad.

A Corvallis boy was brought in to view his new-born baby brother. He looked it over with dissatisfaction, and finally asked, "Mamma, where did this come from?" "An angel brought it, Jimmy." "Well, mamma, all I've got to say is that you're dead easy; I'd like to see any old angel put off any such a looking thing as that on me. I s'pose we're stuck, unless I can work Johnny Jones, and trade it sight unsee for one of his pups."

Grit, granulated bone, bone meal, nest eggs and Pratt's Poultry Food are what everybody uses now-a-days who are in the poultry business for the money there is in it. All for sale by Krogstad.

An eastern editor says that a man got into trouble by marrying two wives. A western editor says that many have done the same thing by marrying one. A northern editor says that quite a number of his friends found trouble enough in barely promising to marry without going any farther. A southern editor says that a friend of his was bothered when he was simply found in company with another man's wife.
