"Jest Do Your Best"

The sins are bad when folks commence
A finding fault with Providence,
And balkin' cause the earth don't shake
At every prancing step they take.
No man is great till he can see
How less than little he would be
If stripped to self, and stark and bare
He hung his sign out anywhere.
My doctrine is to lay aside
Contentions and be satisfied;
Jest do yer best, and praise er blame
That follers that counts jest the same.
I've allus noticed great success
It mixes with troubles, more er less,
And it's the man who does the best
That gets more kicks than all the rest.
—James Whitcomb Riley.

Tariff and Trusts.

The platform of the Iowa Democrats repeats the charge that a protective policy is the parent of trusts. This statement was especially blatant when the coal strike of 1902 threatened to bring upon the country a dreadful fuel famine. Congress removed the duty on coal and the article could then come in free from all parts of the world. Boston is near the Canadian mines, and should have been benefited by free coal, if the claims made for it were true. Senator Lodge has pointed out in a speech that the price of coal remained the same. Consumers in Boston were not helped to the extent of a penny by the removal of the duty nor was any advantage noticed in other cities. When the duty was taken off on this side of the ocean, the price of coal for shipment was correspondingly marked up on the other side. American consumers made nothing by the change. At the end of the year prescribed the duty again became operative, and without increasing the cost of coal in this country.

If the duty on coal had not been removed when a coal famine was impending there would have been a tremendous hue and cry about a "robber tariff" and its parentage of the coal trust. Statistics would have been showered upon the people assuming to show that the duty on coal would be a sure cure for all the evils of the situation. Iowa Democrats have plunged anew into talk of that sort, piling up the agony about a tariff system creating and fostering the trusts. No doubt that gammon will be plentiful among Democratic speakers this year. Intelligent persons will let it pass for the empty rant that it is. Not one known fact warrants the charge.—Cripple Creek Star.

One on Her.

For years there had been a feeling of goodfellowship between them, and the fact that they were distantly related led him to consider himself privileged where she was concerned. Still, on opening his box on Christmas morning she was somewhat surprised to see two shining silver buckles smiling at her. There was no mistaking what manner of gift it was, for the buckles were interlaced with handsome black satin ribbon, and the pair lay side by side. That was not the sort of gift she liked from a man, and, besides, she did not wear that kind, so she laid the aside, thinking, "I'll give them to someone else sometime," and she wrote her note of thanks, saying that modesty prevented her from calling them by their proper name, but they were very handsome and she most grateful. The return mail brought this brief note from him:

"Your modesty was quite unnecessary. Had you taken they trouble to take my gift from the box you would have found a muff-holder."—June Lippincott's.

The editor of a Missouri paper thinks the time will come when bed-bugs will be substituted for raisins. He will receive the heartfelt thanks of an army of travelers and others if he will find some way of substituting raisins for bed-bugs.

An exchange tells of a minister that applied for an increase in salary. "Salary?" cried one of the pillars of the church, "why I thought you worked for souls." "And so I do," replied the minister, "but I can't eat souls, and if I could it would take a good many the size of yours to make a good square meal."
