

Catarrh

Whether it is of the nose, throat, stomach, bowels, or more delicate organs, catarrh is always debilitating and should never fall of attention.

It is a discharge from the mucous membrane when kept in a state of inflammation by an impure, commonly scrofulous, condition of the blood.

Got the Tune All Right.

A new Irish porter was put at work on an English train. The head porter, says Household Words, directed the new man to imitate him closely, and thereby learn his duties.

When the first train came into the station the head porter shouted, "Ferryhill; change for Hartlepool, Stockton and Middlesborough; change for Spennymoor, Coxhoe and Trimdon; keep your seats going north."

Barney strode after him and shouted in a louder voice: "Fareyhill; change for Dahore, Umphump, Tootalooral, Diderham; change for Coxcomb, Morrham, Findham, Coldham; kape your seats where you are."

The station-master called him aside and showed him the right names on the time-table.

Barney removed his cap and said politely, "Thank you, sor. I got hold of the music, but I couldn't catch the words."

The Point of View.

"Have you a good cook?" asked Mrs. Bond Hill.

"Yes, she's good enough," replied Mrs. Chester Park. "She attends church three times a week and all that, but her cooking is something fierce."

"Your wife is a very sick woman," said the grave old physician, "and while I do not wish to alarm you, I have my doubts as to her recovery."

"Oh, she'll pull through all right, doctor," replied the wise husband. "Her dressmaker sent home a new gown yesterday and she hasn't tried it on."

Miss M. Cartledge gives some helpful advice to young girls. Her letter is but one of thousands which prove that nothing is so helpful to young girls who are just arriving at the period of womanhood as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound too highly, for it is the only medicine I ever tried which cured me. I suffered from my first menstrual period, I felt so weak and dizzy at times I could not pursue my studies with the usual interest. My thoughts became sluggish, I had headaches, backaches and sinking spells, also pains in the back and lower limbs. In fact, I was sick all over."

"Finally, after many other remedies had been tried, we were advised to get Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am pleased to say that after taking it only two weeks, a wonderful change for the better took place, and in a short time I was in perfect health. I felt buoyant, full of life, and found all work a pastime. I am indeed glad to tell my experience with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for it made a different girl of me. Yours very truly, Miss M. CARTLEDGE, 533 Whitehall St., Atlanta, Ga."—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

PRESIDENTS AS SPORTSMEN.

Roosevelt Not the Only One to Indulge in Hunting.

Persons interested in the big game hunting trips and the daily athletic exercises of President Roosevelt need only to examine the records of former presidents to learn that he is by no means the first executive to spend his vacations and leisure hours in the pursuit of sports, says the Philadelphia Ledger. No more arduous fisherman and duck shooter could be imagined than President Cleveland. At his home near Buzzard's Bay he spent every moment of his leisure time in his favorite pastime with the rod and reel. It was a common thing to see Mr. Cleveland out to catch the proper tide even before dawn, and his skill is said to have been equal to that of any of the old shellbacks in the neighborhood when it came to playing a bass.

Nor was President Cleveland the first to dignify the ground which is popularly called the "presidential hunting preserves." President Harrison went duck shooting along the shores of these waterways and hunted every foot of them clear to the sea. All sorts of wild duck abound in this district, among them canvasbacks, and besides these quail, pheasant, snipe, and wild turkey are to be found. President Harrison was a fairly good shot with a gun, but his first venture proved slightly disappointing, for he mistook a black pig belonging to a negro for a raccoon. He offered at once to settle for the pig, but the patriotic owned declared on the ground that he had been highly honored by a president of the United States shooting his pig, and that the proud distinction would be handed down from one generation to another in his family. President Harrison never took much to horseback riding nor to field sports, but with shooting he fell more and more in love as he became older. He even shot buck from a "sneak-box," an achievement of which any duck hunter may well be proud.

Before George Washington became Gen. Washington he hunted all over this same ground. After he became a general he had little time for hunting and shooting, but he was passionately fond of horseback riding and was considered an excellent horseman even during the days when lumbering stage coaches were responsible for much riding in the saddle and when horsemen were plentiful.

Curious to say, fond as President Cleveland and Harrison were of the water front, neither of them ever found pleasure in swimming. President John Quincy Adams was by all odds the swimmer president of the White House. Next to Benjamin Franklin he was the best swimmer of any public man in Washington. President Adams also was a remarkable walker and frequently combined his two hobbies. Often he arose before dawn, walked as far as Georgetown, where he had a secluded nook, and stripping plunged into the Potomac. Then, after a long, refreshing swim, he would dress and walk back to his home, where he arrived by break of day, ready for whatever came.

President Arthur was always especially fond of camping and hunting and fishing, and on one occasion was 100 miles from where he might have been reached by telegraph wire. Bass and trout were Mr. Arthur's favorites. He is said to have been remarkably expert at casting the fly, and once, when on a visit south, the Fishing club of Louisville presented him with an exquisite rod, suitably engraved, and of this the president ever felt especially proud.

President Garfield was also given to the pursuit of sports. He did not care for fishing, however. Hunting was his pet diversion. But aside from this he took a lively interest in all sorts of field sports, especially in the national game, baseball. At no time was there a more enthusiastic baseball "crank" in Washington than was the president. He was elected an honorary member of the old National baseball club, and he frequently attended the games played by his team, and followed its victories with a jealous eye in the morning newspapers. Billiards was another favorite diversion with President Garfield. During his administration a new billiard table was placed in the basement of the White House, and here he played almost regularly every afternoon. President Garfield also was fond of horseback riding. Taking him all in all, he was probably the most all-round sporting president, for no matter what the sport he felt at least a mild interest in it.

SAVED CHILD'S LIFE.

A Remarkable Cure of Dropsy by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Sedgwick, Ark., July 11.—The case of W. S. Taylor's little son is looked upon by those interested in medical matters as one of the most wonderful on record. In this connection his father makes the following statement:

"Last September, my little boy had dropsy; his feet and limbs were swollen to such an extent that he could not walk or put his shoes on. The treatment that the doctors were giving him seemed to do him no good and two or three people said his days were short, even the doctors, two of the best in the country told me he would not get better. I stopped their medicine and at once sent for Dodd's Kidney Pills. I gave him three pills a day, one morning, noon and night for eight days; at the end of the eighth day the swelling was all gone, but to give the medicine justice, I gave him eleven more pills. I used thirty-five pills in all and he was entirely cured. I consider your medicine saved my child's life. When the thirty-five pills were given him, he could run, dance and sing, whereas before he was an invalid in his mother's arms from morning until night."

No Doubt About It.

Prisoner—I was so drunk, your honor, that I couldn't tell a pretty woman from an ugly one.

"That is no excuse."

"No, but it explains why they objected."

Merely a Reminder.

"Yes," remarked young DeBore as the clock chimed the hour of 11 p. m., "I'm—aw—very absent minded, doncher know? I'm always forgetting something that I—aw—should remember."

"I have noticed that," rejoined Miss Cautique. "You even forget how to tell time by the clock."

Desperate Youth.

On the thirtieth floor of the office building Percy Pen leaned out of the window.

"Refuse me," he cried, "and in ten minutes I will be found on that sidewalk far below."

Agnes, the beautiful stenographer, shuddered and accepted him. After the wedding she said, softly:

"And would you really have jumped out of the window?"

Percy Pen grinned.

"No, darling; I intended taking the elevator down."

Mistake Somewhere.

"Mr. Millyuns," said the poor but aristocratic widow, "allow me to present my three charming daughters."

"Good heavens, madam!" exclaimed young Millyuns, "there must be a mistake somewhere. I'm not a senator from Utah."

METHODS OF THE QUACK.

New York Is His Chosen Field, an Eastern Medico Says.

The physicians of Philadelphia and Boston sniff more or less haughtily at the ways of their fellow healers of New York, according to a very frank and conservative physician of this town. The conversation at the start was about new remedies, concerning many of which the doctor, who was taking his own profession to task, was very skeptical.

"The spirit of empiricism," he said, "is altogether too prevalent in this city and it is growing every year. For the sake of money, for the sake of advertising without appearing to advertise, many physicians who are rated as reputable are trying all sorts of ways of violating the good old spirit of medical ethics without offending against the letter and being called to account by their associates."

"It is in the field of so-called new remedies and discoveries that the evil is most manifest. Quackery has improved its methods and glossed over its activities with a veneer of what passes for scientific research. Scientific expression and Latin names have been more generally adopted to describe what the quack of a generation or so ago would have been satisfied to call a plain 'cure-all,' and hawk at the country fairs. Now it is different. The empiric produces his concoction and cajoles some physician into writing a quasi-scientific article about it for a medical journal."

"That is all that is needed. Men of standing accept the fact, whatever it may be, and furnish the articles; and journals, regardless of the fact that they have reputations to sustain, print them. Then they are reprinted far and wide as contributions by Dr. So-and-So, graduate of this, that and the other medical school, to such and such a journal. Rural physicians all over the country read and believe, and a demand for the new stuff is practically assured."

"Hundreds of these new things are brought out every year, and although they all have advocates, it is fair to say that not more than one in a hundred is worthy of adoption by the profession or of being rated as a genuine contribution to the science of medicine."

"It is in this city that most of them are fathered and touted, and, as I said before, the practice has brought us into more or less disrepute with the more conservative and less avaricious physicians of Boston and Philadelphia. Of course, in consideration of a question like this, Chicago doesn't count."—New York Sun.

LINCOLN FOND OF CIRCUIT.

Welcomed by All the Other Lawyers and by the Landlords.

Following the court about on the circuit was, no doubt, the joy, of Lincoln's life. He was so fond of it that he declined a flattering offer to enter a lucrative law partnership in Chicago, because, as he contended, it would necessitate more or less confinement in the office and therefore keep him off the circuit.

Seated in a one-horse buggy, behind a sorry-looking animal, he would set out from Springfield to be gone for weeks at a stretch. The lawyers, as he drove into each successive place, eagerly anticipating a new stock of stories, gave him a cordial welcome and the landlords hailed his coming with delight, for he was one of the most patient and uncomplaining guests. "If every other fellow," relates one of his colleagues, "grumbled at the indifferent accommodations and scant fare which greeted us at many of the dingy taverns we struck Lincoln said nothing."

His forbearance in this regard well warrants the observation he is said on one occasion to have made, that he never so completely felt his "own unworthiness as when he stood face to face with a real, live hotel clerk." How he appeared on the circuit may be gleaned from this sketch of him drawn by Henry C. Whitney, one of his colleagues in Central Illinois, who is yet living:

"His hat was brown, faded and the nap usually worn or rubbed off. He wore a short coat and sometimes a shawl. His coat and vest hung loosely on his giant frame. His trousers were invariably too short. In one hand he carried a faded green umbrella with 'A. Lincoln' in large white cotton or muslin letters, sewed on the inside. The knob was gone from the handle and a piece of cord was usually tied around the middle of the umbrella to keep it from flying open. In the other hand he carried a carpet bag, in which were stored the few papers he used in court and underclothing enough to last till his return to Springfield."—Century.
