INHERITED SCROFULA

When a child I had a very severe attack of Diphtheria, which came near proving fatal. Upon recovery the glands of the neck were very much enlarged, and after the free use of iodine, the right one was reduced to its normal size, but the left one continued to grow—very slowly at first, until it was about the size of a goose egg, which began to press on the windpipe, causing difficult breathing, and became very painful. An incision was made and a large quantity of pus discharged. The gland was removed, or as much as could with safety be taken out. For ten years I wore a little piece of cloth about an inch long in my neck to keep the place open. During this time I had to have it cut open by the doctor every time I took cold or the opening clogged. In the Spring or early Summer of 1884 I was persuaded by my wife to use S. S. S., which I did, strictly in accordance with directions. I took twenty-six large bottles, and was entirely cured, for I have not suffered since that time.

HOW THE FRENCH MAKE COFFEE

Boiling Water Made to Percolate Through the Ground Berry.
Coffee should be ground as needed. If ground too long in advance it dries and loses both strength and flavor.

Roasted coffee must be kept in a dry and rather warm place, covered tightly in a tin box, or better still, in an earthen jar. It is easily injured by cold and dampness. Coffee is not made in France by the boiling process. The ground coffee is put into a filter and boiling water poured slowly through it; in this way its full flavor is drawn out, without the acidity so often noticeable in boiled coffee.

A French coffee-pot is the simplest thing in the world, and if the few directions given below are followed, anybody can make good coffee. The pot is in two parts, the lower portion receiving the liquid after it has filtered through the grounds in the top. It is most important that the water should be boiling.

One tablespoonful of ground coffee is allowed for each cup, although if more than four cups are made, less is needed in proportion. For instance, for five cups four large tablespoonfuls of coffee will be sufficient; for six cups five tablespoonfuls, and for eight cups six tablespoonfuls would make very strong coffee. On the other hand, if but one cup is desired, two tablespoonfuls of coffee would be required. Water filtering too quickly through such a small quantity of coffee as one tablespoonful would not carry with it sufficient strength and flavor. It is also necessary to have different-sized pots for the different quantities of coffee to be made.

Before placing the ground coffee in the filter, heat the two parts of the pot with boiling water, thus preventing the chill which would ensue without this precaution during the process of percolation.

Measure as many cupfuls of water as you need cupfuls of coffee, and one or two over, according to the quantity made, the grounds absorbing at least one cupful of liquid in four. When the water is in full ebullition pour it slowly over the grounds in the filter through the small strainer on top. Keep the water boiling during the whole process by replacing it over the fire whenever you have to wait for the subsidence of the bubbles which rise to the top. When the water has filtered through, the upper part of the pot can be removed, and the cover adjusted on the lower portion, in which the coffee may be served.—Woman's Home Companion.

Career of a Bandit.

Raisull, the bandit who kidnaped Mr. Perdicaris and his English stepson, is said to be a very worthy person, a good father, a faithful son, the husband of a minimum of Moslem wives, and a thrifty and enterprising genius, with a turn for commercialism which has raised him above his former humble estate as a downtrodden peasant in the tolls of Jewish money-lenders. He and his fellow villagers were falling ever deeper in debt to the Jews; the more they paid, the more they seemed to owe, and they felt the tolls closing around them. Then Raisull had a brilliant idea: why not burn the Jewish village and destroy all evidence of indebtedness at one fell swoop? He tried it, and his consequent emancipation was the beginning of a new life for Raisull, who is said to be a second Namgay Doola, a red-headed, red-bearded savage of great muscular force and few scruples. He has prospered in the work of village burning, and has an enthusiastic following, for whom he is what Napoleon was for the Old Guard. He is even likely to rival Bu-Hamara, the pretender, who nearly shook the throne of Morocco a year ago. As Bu-Hamara's following has diminished, the adherents of Raisull have increased and multiplied.—Harper's Weekly.

Filipino Women.

From the Filipino Census Report this is taken:
"A very noticeable characteristic of the people here is the aggressiveness displayed by the females and their evident superiority to the males in business capacity. Whenever a family rises from the lower ranks of society to a position of comparative affluence and social importance it is usually found to be due to the tact, energy and close attention to business of the female member of the matrimonial partnership. The women are, when so inclined, heavier gamblers and users of intoxicants, and more prone to resort to personal violence in settling their differences than are the men."

The old man called his typewriter into his private office.
"Miss Hammerton," he said, "you have been a faithful worker during the two years you have been in my employ, and I believe you would make a desirable wife. May I hope to claim you as such?"

"While I appreciate your kindness and the honor you do me in making the offer, Mr. Oldboy," replied the little azure-eyed blonde, "before accepting I wish to say one word. As your stenographer I have allowed you to dictate to me, but if I become your wife I shall reserve the right to do all the dictating myself, and—"

"Pardon me for interrupting you, Miss Hammerton," said the old man, "but I think it will be best for you to continue in your present position. I shall add an extra dollar to your salary, which will enable you to drown in ice cream soda any hopes that my words may have raised."

Miss Alice Bailey, of Atlanta, Ga., escaped the surgeon's knife, by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I wish to express my gratitude for the restored health and happiness Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought into my life.

"I had suffered for three years with terrible pains at the time of menstruation, and did not know what the trouble was until the doctor pronounced it inflammation of the ovaries, and proposed an operation.

"I felt so weak and sick that I felt sure that I could not survive the ordeal, and so I told him that I would not undergo it. The following week I read an advertisement in the paper of your Vegetable Compound in such an emergency, and so I decided to try it. Great was my joy to find that I actually improved after taking two bottles, so I kept taking it for ten weeks, and at the end of that time I was cured. I had gained eighteen pounds and was in excellent health, and am now.
