California cherries sold in Philadelphia a few days ago for $10 per pound. The fool and his money are evidently to be found in the old Quaker city.

The United States cruiser Boston will be stationed at Portland during the Fair. This will probably give the desired tinge of "calchah" to the big show.

As evidence that the Lewis and Clark Fair is taxing Portland's capacity, we pass along the fact that six families and one cow have been found occupying one house in our metropolis.

A Tacoma, Wash., man's hat blew off and landed in front of an approaching train. The hat was saved, but the man wasn't. They take such risks only up in close-fisted Washington.

An 11-year-old boy has been arrested for smoking cigarettes on the streets of Portland. These continued evidences of Portland's advancement are causing the world to rise up and rubber.

Several of the middle west states were hit by a cold wave a few days ago and the fruit crop almost knocked out. Oregon still holds out the promise of a record-breaking crop in all lines.

It is now reported that the land fraud cases up in the great state of Washington make those in Oregon look like stealing a cent. Washington's chief ambition for years has been to outdo us.

A Clackamas county wife contracted the habit of beating her husband with chairs and the bald-headed end of a broom. The unfortunate man asks for a divorce, as Oregon's famous whipping-post law doesn't cover the case.

The Pacific States Packing company of Portland has been yanked into court charged with converting putrid meat into sausage and selling the same. As the evidence seems to come straight, it might be wise to sidestep Portland sausage until the sign is again right—or in canvas.

Later reports from the wilds of Colorado prove that President Roosevelt isn't such a wild and woolly nimrod as he has been painted by the yellow correspondents of the daily newspapers. The President is simply out for a good time, which is his blessed American privilege.

The beef trust officials have fled to Canada rather than tell what they know about that particular octopus. The present administration may not accomplish all it undertakes in the line of trust-busting, but it certainly is creating quite a panic among the veal vampires and corporation cormorants.

The United States Supreme Court has decided that states cannot legally make laws limiting the hours of labor. As four of the members of the court tendered a dissenting opinion, the question can hardly be considered permanently settled, although many employers will probably feel justified in disregarding the 8-hour and other laws limiting the daily period of labor. It spells trouble for the states where such laws are in force.

Bids Wanted.

Notice is hereby given that sealed bids will be received by the County Court for the delivery at the Courthouse woodshed of 18 cords of vine-ample and cherry and 2 cords of old-growth fir. Said bids to be opened at 10 o'clock a. m. June 8, 1905. The Court reserves the right to reject any or all bids. By order of the County Court. IRA WADE, County Clerk.

A Kansas paper says the inventor of a new feeding bottle for infants sent out the following among his direction for using: When the baby is done, unscrew it and lay in a cool place under the hydrant. If the baby does not thrive on fresh milk, it should be boiled.

A schoolman in Colorado mistook a young calf for a wild animal, the other evening while returning from school started to run. The calf ran after her, and when heroically rescued by some of the big boys, they had the temerity to declare that they saw three calves instead of one.
