Obeded Orders.

"Speaking of the vital question of the hour, the servant," said Mrs. Young Matron, "I engaged a cook-lady last week who came well recommended. After she had been with me several days I said to her, 'I will stir up a fruit-cake but I want you to attend to the baking of it. Bake the cake,' said I impressively, 'one hour by the clock!' pointing to one of those cheap affairs, made of metal of some kind, that hung on the kitchen wall.

"Sure, Mum," Nora replied. "I went upstairs, took my sewing, and soon the hum of the sewing-machine broke the stillness. After a while my nostrils were assailed by a most peculiar odor. I sniffed the atmosphere, trying to determine what the smell might be, for sometimes trash was thrown into the furnace along with the coal. It smelled neither like burning rags, paper, nor rubber. I threw down my sewing and hastened to the kitchen.

"What is burning, Nora?" I exclaimed.

"Faith, Mum, it must be the clock," she replied.

"The clock! what do you mean?"

"Nora opened the oven door, disclosing the cake and what was left of the clock 'side by each.' I grabbed the coal-scuttle and hurriedly raked into it the smelly mass.

"What on earth, Nora," I demanded, "made you put the clock in the oven? Are you crazy?"

"Crazy, is it!" she made answer in tones that a tragedy queen might have envied, "and I just a-followin' your orders. Didn't you tell me yourself, 'Nora, bake the cake one hour by the clock?'—Lippincotts.

It's said that a certain girl described her visit to the Lewis and Clark exposition as follows: "Oh but I had a perfectly lovely time. I contrived there at 9:35 and took a cabby to the hotel. It was soon converted you know. We stepped at the house where we rode to our rooms in a refrigerator and our rooms were illustrated with electric lights. I did not have any appetite and could not get a thing I could realize. Honestly when I got home I was almost an individual."
