storks in Latin authors, but one of these is interesting. The birds have a curious custom of snapping their bills, making quite a sharp noise. Young and old birds, both during and after the breeding season, constantly do this. In the writings of Persius there is a reference to this habit. "There are," he says, "three favorite ways of deriding a man-by putting the hands beside the head like asses' ears, by putting out the tongue like a dog and snapping the fingers against the paim first two methods of mockery are plain, but what was the cause of the last?-Notes and Queries.

The Snake's Tongue,

The snake's tongue proves to be a most remarkable organ. A student finds its chief function is connected with a sense of feeling without touch and may be a finer development of the sense that enables some people to avoid striking obstacles in the dark. The forked tip and the numerous folds behind it greatly increase the surface exposure. The cells of the epidermis areinterlaced by a network of extremely fine nerve fibers, which center in a deep nerve plexus beneath the epidermis and extending out into the folds.

Restless Nature.

Nothing in nature is absolutely permanent. Changes are going on slowly, but steadily, every moment, parts of the earth being elevated above the sea, parts sinking below it, the ocean wearing away the coast in one place and infinity.

The other day I passed a house the lasly of which had on her working clothes and the top button of her dress was undone, showing about one inch of lar line. She was so modest that she held the dress together while I talked with her a minute. That evening I saw her on the street in a garment that showed three or four inches more of her plukness than did the house dress and a hundred men gazed at her and remarked about her lack of modesty. -Exchange.
