A candidate for office is frequently credited with being the "author of his own platform;" he advocates popular and sensible measures and is lavishly praised for his wisdom and forethought. There is more or less hot air in this. An office-seeker is less a moulder of public opinion than is a newspaper—and the latter misses the honor widely. As a matter of fact, candidates generally put their ears to the ground and get their cues from old Vox Populi. As soon as a candidate takes on a good load of public sentiment—or opinion—he immediately announces his candidacy—and his platform. The candidate who is the most eager to get his name before the people is the one to whom thoughtless persons attribute extraordinary wisdom and marks of statesmanship. This candidate, you will observe, is not the kind the office is after with a search warrant. Any citizen of average intelligence may advocate wise and popular measures, but not all are cut out for high positions in life. This may be applied wherever it seems to fit.

The Weather Bureau states that the warmest January in Portland since the bureau was established there was that of 1875. The Oregonian says 't ain't so; that January, 1875, was a very cold month, with several days of zero weather, rivers frozen over and navigation suspended. This matter should certainly be referred to the oldest inhabitant. If we are not mistaken, we have heard it stated that that was the year and month when there were 31 consecutive days of sunshine in this Yaquina Bay country, with a strawberry-and-cream accompaniment. Just a little milder, brighter and dryer than the average, you know.

Second the Motion!

The probabilities are that Joseph R. Whitney, the present incumbent of the office of state printer, will have no opposition at the April primaries nor in the party field at any time. This is as it should be.

Mr. Whitney has given the state the benefit of his complete equipment for the office, and has done it at the least cost possible with the proper conduct of this important branch of the public service. The post is one that requires an adept at the forefront of its administration, and this he is in every sense of the word, the volume and character of the output being tangible and indisputable evidence of his professional fitness for the position. It is the better part of politics to continue the tenure of such a public servant rather than to break in upon the good work that is being accomplished, and which means so much in the broad field of the state's requirements.

If there were any expediency in considering the election of a new man in this relation, or if party exigencies demanded another candidate, or if there were others seeking the office with claims upon the people that could not be ignored, then perhaps his renomination might be questioned, but as none of these conditions exist, and he has given irreproachable service for the four years he has been there no reasonable cause exists for obstructing his nomination and election for another term of administration.

His good faith in party matters is one of the traditions of the republican party in Oregon. He has never been known to do nor say a thing that brought the shadow of hazard upon its policies or people, nor has his record, in office and out of it, an atom of reproach to it from any source or cause. He is clean, capable and proven, three imperative attributes demanded by all parties, and especially by the republican party of Oregon.

There is, therefore, every reason for his being put back as the head of the great printery, and this recognition of fidelity and personal equipment is in strict accord with republican principles, the cardinal, actuating doctrine of which is the due and wholesome recompense of its best and ablest servants and representatives.—Astorian.

Cut this out and take it to O. O. Krosgstad's drug store and get a free sample of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. These tablets are far superior to pills, being easier to take and more pleasant in effect. They correct disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels. O. O. Krosgstad.

Hawley.

The character of the statement in which W. C. Hawley's candidacy for congressman from this district is announced, ought to leave no room for the republicans to doubt as to which man they ought to name as their candidate. Hawley's platform, except for its unnecessary length, is the production of a statesman. His mental horizon is that of a man. His grasp of conditions is from the plane of bigness and breadth of view. His words are not those of a carping politician, but of a constructive leader. Above all, he is a clean man, whose hand would never be out for the graft that is already over much in vogue in Washington.

They say however, he cannot be elected, because he is not politician enough. Heaven help the republicans if they cannot recognize the difference between a statesman and a politician, and if they come to the pass where they will turn down the one and glorify the other.—Corvallis Times.

The brewery employes of Cincinnati, Ohio, went on a strike for an eight-hour day. They were granted a nine-hour day and free beer, which the majority probably will consider a bigger victory than they expected.

The Grip.

"Before we can sympathize with others, we must have suffered ourselves." No one can realize the suffering attendant upon an attack of the grip, unless he has had the actual experience. There is probably no disease that causes so much physical or mental agony, or which so successfully defies medical aid. All danger from the grip, however, may be avoided by the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy, not one case has ever been reported that has resulted in pneumonia or that has not recovered. For sale by O. O. Krosgstad.

Well Satisfied.

"If I should be given my choice of either the office I now hold or that of congressman from the first district, it would not take me a minute to decide to stay right where I am," said Circuit Judge Lawrence T. Harris, of the second judicial district, who was registered at the Imperial. It was Judge Harris, then speaker of the house of representatives, who gave Congressman Binger Hermann such a close run for the congressional nomination at the Eugene convention in the fall of 1903. He has scores of friends who believe he could be elected if he were to enter the congressional race in the first district, but he enters an emphatic "no."

"I am out of politics altogether now," he continued. "A poor man has no business in politics; much less a man who has ambition to succeed in any profession. Now I am in a position to develop in my chosen profession. Were I to go to congress, I would be retrograding in legal matters, whereas, if I continue on the bench of my district, I will at least be able to go into the field and practice law at any time."—Portland Telegram.

No Middle Ground.

The proprietor of the dry goods store had proposed to the milliner who owned the establishment across the way.

"But, Mr. Wrappemup," she said, "I'm not sure that I like you well enough to marry you. Let us be merely friends, as heretofore."
"We can't, Miss Wribbens," he answered through his set teeth. "There is no friendship in trade. You will like me well enough to marry me or I'll add a millinery department to my stock!"—Chicago Tribune.

The Reason.

Magistrate—So you admit having been engaged in making counterfeit money? Prisoner—Yes, your honor. You see, the supply of the genuine article is so very short.
