Look at the condition of the working man of today, remarks an exchange: Who is he? The tinner is continually going up the spout, the plumbers are always in the gutter, the paper hangers are up against the wall, bankers are always compelled to raise the dough, the blacksmith is always on the strike, the policeman has to be on his beat to live, the shoemakers have to work on their uppers and get waxed in the end, the clock makers run on tick and never on time, barbers have to skin people to live, the washerwoman is always in the soak and she is the only one you see hanging on the line. They evidently forgot us printers but we are still picking up.
