If local news don't get more plentiful than it has been during the past month, we're going to declare a holiday for the Review and go visiting.—Jefferson Review.

Let him who is inclined to take a gloomy view of the outlook for business ponder well these facts: While the United States has only 5 per cent of the world's population, it produces 20 per cent of the world's wheat, 25 per cent of its gold, 33 per cent of its coal, 35 per cent of its manufactures, 36 per cent of its silver, 40 per cent of its iron, 42 per cent of its steel, 52 per cent of its petroleum, 55 per cent of its copper, 70 per cent of its cotton and 80 per cent of its corn.—Ex.

Sixty thousand aliens leaving our shores in one week after half that number had departed the preceding week, makes quite novel reading and is perhaps a little humiliating to the patriotic American who believes that his country is the nation par excellence on the face of the globe. But the figures have their gratifying aspect, for they indicate that our modern cheap and quick means of transportation will in the future act as a sort of industrial balance wheel or safety valve. Periods of industrial depression will find us less hampered than of old with an over-supply of workers, while the tendency of the new-comers to slip back home at the first sign of industrial slackening may very easily prevent the slackening from becoming a stoppage.—Salem Statesman.

A Michigan editor grew tired of wielding the whitewash brush in the matter of obituaries and decided to reform and tell the truth just for once. He commented as follows upon the death of a well known citizen: "Died"—aged 56 years, 6 months and 13 days. Deceased was a mild mannered pirate with a mouth for whiskey and an eye for boodle. He came here in the night with another man's wife and joined the church at the first opportunity. He owed us several dollars for the paper and a large meat bill and you could hear him pray six blocks. He died singing "Jesus paid it all" and we suppose He did for he never paid anything himself. He was buried in an asbestos casket and his many friends threw palm leaves into the grave for he may need them. His tombstone will be a favorite roosting place for hoot owls."

A Times man has had a ride on the Corvallis & Alsea railroad. It was on a hand car, and from a point near Mary's river to a spot about 100 yards south of the old Southern Pacific depot building. The track is now laid for that distance, but further progress is now temporarily delayed until the span of the Mary's river bridge can be completed. The north end of the new track begins at a point 100 yards south of the depot where it connects with the Southern Pacific siding. For the present, all the construction force is engaged in framing the span for the bridge, a work that will require some time. After it is in position, the tracklaying will be resumed. Enough ties, iron and piling is on hand to complete the road the entire distance covered by the grade, which ends four miles this side of Monroe. Grading will not be resumed until the weather settles in the spring.—Corvallis Times.

There is nothing to it, when it comes to growing potatoes in Oregon. Here is one in the Times office that weighs six and one half pounds. It was grown on the Clyde Beach farm, a mile east of Corvallis. It is 15 inches long and four inches thick, not measuring the hump that widens it to six inches. There was 17 acres in the field, and the yield was 4,000 bushels, an average of 232 bushels per acre. Twelve individual potatoes in the lot weighed a bushel. Several weighed six pounds each. The soil is a loam, located on high bottom land. When one looks at a six and a half pound potato, he has thoughts of bigness. If a timid lady should meet it in the road, or a nervous man fall over it in the dark, they would yell for help. If a small native son had a field of such spuds to dig, there would be vast troubles and tribulation in Denmark.—Corvallis Times.
