Labor Troubles.

The following edifying ruminations were beaten out on an appreciative typewriter by a worried editorial writer who was trying to get up a screed on the overcrowding of tenements while a bore sat by and insisted on talking in a loud tone of voice:

"New York tenement-house problem! Tough proposition, old Miss Double-Keyboard. Especially so when some runner for a hot-air factory sits around and keeps talking about things that are of no interest to anyone but him self. I can't very well get up and throw him out so the next best thing I can do is to hammer this out and make him believe that I'm working like the devil."

"I've been working on this thing 15 minutes with him talking a blue streak to me and endeavoring to get me to answer. If I only had a dynamite bomb I'd be tempted to put it under his chair and see if that wouldn't make him go away. The success of some fellows of making dam nuisances of themselves is so pronounced that it's a wonder to me that they escape violent death as long as they do."

"At this moment he is making a move as though he intends to go. If he fails me now I shall certainly be driven to desperate measures. He has his hand on the door knob—he goes—!—Oh h—ll! He's back with another question. I must commit murder. I won't submit to this torture! ! ! He sits down again! ! !—? ? ?"—Oregonian.

Jesus Garcia, a Mexican and an engineer on a mining train on a railroad down in Arizona, discovered while standing at a little station the other day that some of his cars were on fire. Among these cars were two loaded with powder. Should he detach the locomotive and take flight, leaving the station and little settlement to be blown up or not? He chose not to do so, but, ordering the train crew off opened the throttle wide and dashed for the country. When the explosion came the train was far enough in the country to save all lives but his own. He sacrificed himself for the rest, this unknown Mexican who did not know that he was one of the noblest of heroes. And in spite of these almost daily happenings, among obscure people in the course of their ordinary tasks, pessimists talk of modern degeneracy. Such critics are slow to learn that deeds of courage are not performed in these days by men in gay trappings; waving swords above their heads.

Bad Stomach Trouble Cured.

Having been sick for the past two years with a bad stomach trouble, a friend gave me a dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. They did me so much good that I bought a bottle of them and have used twelve bottles in all. Today I am well of a bad stomach trouble.—MRS. JOHN LOWE, Cooper, Maine. These tablets are for sale by O. O. Krogstad.

An Indiana traveling man told the following story the other day of an incident on the road. He was in the smoking car of an express train reading his paper when a man rushed in from the car behind the smoker, evidently in great agitation, and said: "Has anybody in this car any whiskey? A woman in the car behind has fainted! Instantly dozens of flasks were produced. The man who had asked for it picked out the largest one, drew the cork, and put the bottle to his lips. With a long satisfied sigh, he handed back the flask and remarked: "That did me a lot of good. I needed in, for it makes me feel queer to see a woman faint anyway!"

A young husband was told by his affectionate spouse: "Well, dear, you know how I have been scraping and saving for a new costume; well, I've decided on it now. It is to be made of pale green broadcloth, and it will cost $92.50, and I want you to help me a little. How much do you need? asked the fond hubby. Oh, I've got it all but $90, was the cheerful reply.
