Populate Oregon.

Every property holder and every citizen of the state of Oregon is indebted to the newspapers, the commercial bodies, the schools and the business men for conducting an advertising campaign through 1907 which brought 27,215 people to this state as a result of the colonist rate in March and April, September and October.

No greater returns has ever been achieved as a result of community organization and co-operative advertising. This record of 227 people for every day for 120 days is almost without a parallel in the history of immigration effort anywhere in this country. During the same months of 1906 the colonist rates brought 18,214, showing the unprecedented increase of 9,001, or in round figures 50 per cent.

The colonist rates go into effect again on March 1st, and continue until April 30th, and if the same energetic campaign can be carried on in 1908, even this large influx of new people can be increased, and it is certainly worth while.

The direct benefit of the colonist rate is that it brings people to every section, and builds up the country around all the towns rather than increasing the population of the larger cities. And it has been conclusively proven that immigration comes to communities in direct proportion to the effort expended by them.

During the winter months, January and February particularly, the farmer in the great Middle West (from whence comes our greatest immigration) does his greatest reading, and we want to be sure that he reads the story of Oregon. During the past year more than five million copies of printed matter were circulated from this state, and in all of these the special rate has been prominent.

It has been the constant effort of the Portland Commercial Club in its correspondence throughout the state to impress upon all the people of Oregon that this low fare applies to all points the same as to Portland, and in all advertising this fact has been emphasized.

Immediate organization should be commenced everywhere by the commercial bodies and through the schools. Oregon needs no one thing more than additional population.

An Illinois congressman has struck upon a happy plan of providing ample internal revenue with which to run the government from year to year without drawing on any of its other resources. His scheme is to tax heiresses one-fourth the fortune they would carry across the waters to bestow upon the penniless nobility they marry for a title. If Congressman Sabath can get this measure through, his name will be entitled to the top position in the hall of fame.—Eugene Register.

It is said that a man over by Monmouth puts in his leisure moments jumping back and forth through the eye of a needle. We do not doubt the statement, since he ordered this paper for a year and after taking it eight months had the postmaster mark it "refused."—Town Topics.
