TIP.

[Original.]

"Can you find my dog?" said an old lady to the man at the desk at a police station. She was a diminutive woman with a pale face and grizzly gray wavy hair pulled down in an old fashioned way over her temples.
"Your dog, madam?"
"Yes. He's been missing for weeks. I'm sure he's been stolen, for he wouldn't have left me willingly for the world. He's a Scotch terrier, and his name is Tip. He loves me better than any one, and somehow I can't get along without him."
"When did you miss him, madam?"
"It's three weeks ago last Wednesday. I saw a strange man call to him and pet him. I thought the man had taken a fancy to him—he's such a beauty—but didn't suppose he would steal him. Poor little Tip!"
The last words were spoken with as much tenderness as if Tip had been a kidnapped child.

"Is that all? Were there no other suspicious circumstances connected with your dog's disappearance?"
"Nothing connected with the dog, but something happened that night. Burglars entered the house and took the few spoons I had left of my grandfather's silver."
"Have you recovered them?"
"No, but I wouldn't mind that so much if I had Tip, though I'm very poor. I'm afraid they're not treating him well, and I'm lonesome without him."
"H'm! The man who petted him took him to deprive you of the alarm the dog would give when the house was entered. Burglars won't enter a house without first getting rid of the dog if there is one."
"Do you think so? I supposed he admired him. Everybody admires Tip. Here's his picture."

She drew a photograph from her reticule and handed it to the officer, who inspected it, muttering to himself, "Ugly enough to be a prize fighter." Then to the lady, "I fancy they may not have killed your dog, madam."
"Heaven forbid!" she interrupted, raising her hands and her eyes.
"They would more likely try to sell him since they could easily get a big price for him. I'm afraid we can't do anything for you, madam. If your dog hadn't been stolen to enable the thief or thieves to rob your rouse, I should advise you to advertise a reward for his return, stating that no questions would be asked. But, you see, if they got away with your spoons they wouldn't risk trying to get a reward for the dog. They're not quite such big fools as that. No, ma'am; we can't find your dog for you, but if you choose to leave your address if anything turns up we'll let you know."

The old lady went away sorrowful. A week passed when one morning a policeman called upon her and said the chief would like to see her at the station. She went there and saw the same man behind the desk as before.
"I have word," he said, "that a suspicious character is loitering about Arlington, fifty miles up the railroad. He's got a dog with him which he's trying to sell. I've phoned them to arrest him and hold him till we can discover if the dog's yours."
"I'll go right away and see," cried the old lady excitedly.
"There's no occasion for that," said the man at the desk. "Just wait a moment."

He took up a telephone receiver, called the police station at Arlington and asked to have the dog brought to the phone. When it was announced the dog was there, the chief talked in the receiver: "Hello, doggy! Doggy want a bone? Hello, Tip, Tip, Tip!" Then he asked how the dog had taken his call. The reply came that the only recognition he showed was a slight pricking up his ears at the name Tip.
"Now, madam," said the chief, "you talk to him."
"Tip! Is that you, Tip? Did the naughty man take my little doggie away from me?"
For reply there came a series of joyful barks.
"Let up," came a policeman's voice, "or the dog'll break the machine."
The chief ordered the dog sent down, and the same afternoon he was in his mistress' arms—that is, so long as she could keep him there, for he jumped down and up and circled about, barking, while the old lady sat with joyful tears streaming down her cheeks.

It was a few days after this that the lady received a note from the president of the 4th National bank stating that if she could find it convenient to call at the bank he would be pleased to see her. He added an invitation for her to bring her dog. She sent a reply that the dog was not for sale. That afternoon the president called on the lady.
"There's no use," she said, "for you to try to buy Tip. I wouldn't part with him for all the money in your bank."
"Nor would I deprive you of him for twice that amount. I have called to tell you that Tip has been the means of our recovering $100,000 worth of stolen securities. When you called to him over the phone, the man who stole them was about to be released. He was held for further investigation and turned out to be one of a gang that robbed our bank six months ago. Here are your spoons, and here is the reward offered for the information leading to the recovery of our bonds. I give it to you in trust for Tip as long as he lives, though you are to spend the income and have the principal at his death."

Tip and his mistress are living in luxury.
