A Would Be Deadhead.

(Original.)

A railroad conductor's life is hard enough anyway, but when it comes to making a policeman of himself, in putting off unruly passengers or those who won't pay, it's the meanest job in the world. But when a conductor finds that in putting a man off the train he's been making a fool of himself it's meaner than the meanest job in the world. Besides, there are robberies in which any one of the train force is liable to get a bullet through him.

I'd narrowly escaped death when my train was robbed back in the nineties and on my next trip was mightily disgruntled when on asking a seedy looking man for his ticket he offered me a dirty old pasteboard that hadn't been good for a year. I told him I wouldn't do and asked him to pay his fare. At first he said he hadn't any money, but presently felt in his pockets and drew out some loose change, just enough to take him to a way station about half the distance he wanted to go. Of course I was obliged to carry him as far as he could pay, but I expected to have trouble with him sooner or later, and I did. As we neared the station to which he had paid his way I said to him:

"I want to know if you're going to pay for the rest of your ride. If you're not, I want you to get off here. I won't put you off in a wilderness. I prefer to do so at a station."

"The ticket I showed you is good," he said, "and you've no right to refuse it. I'm going to stay aboard this train."

We were slowing up for the station, and as soon as we stopped I tackled him. He didn't resist till I got him on to the car platform, where half a dozen countrymen at the station could see us, but then he put up a strong fight. He held on to the rail with one hand and punneled me with the other. It occurred to me that he was aiming to excite the sympathy of the men looking on and if I didn't want their interference I'd better do my work pretty quick. I made two or three terrific jerks and got him down on to the lower step of the car, and then he got a new grip, and I had a hard tussle to get him any farther. When I finally flung him on to the station platform my uniform coat was torn to shreds, my cap was knocked down over my eyes and my nose was bleeding.

By this time the onlookers began to take notice of what was going on. They were most of them a bad looking lot. Indeed, it was suspected that the town had harbored the men who had robbed my train. It was plain that they sympathized with the man who wouldn't pay his fare and were about to make a combined rush for me when I pulled the rope and the train started on. I looked back to see my passenger angrily pointing to me as if exciting them to avenge him.

On my return trip, preferring not to have any more scrambles, as we passed the station where I had had the trouble I kept dark, for I fully expected that my deadbeat would be there with supporters to give me a thrashing. I was disappointed, however, for there was no one at the station except the agent and a passenger or two to board the train. I questioned them about my man, and they said the townspeople had befriended him, that he was still there and showed no signs of leaving.

In a few days I was surprised to get a note from the superintendent expressing regret at the trouble I had had and inclosing a check as compensation. I had made no report of the matter and was at a loss to know who had told him of it.

When several of the men who had robbed my train were arrested some five or six weeks later my episode with the deadhead had pretty much passed out of my mind, though by no means out of my remembrance. It turned out that, as suspected, the robbers had been harbored in the town where I had put him off and that several of them lived there. These were the ones arrested. They woke up one fine morning, having slept the night in fancied security, to be taken in custody by a police force sent out by special train that arrived at dawn. Their arrest led to the arrest of others, and a great deal of the plunder they had taken was recovered.

One day I was in the general offices of the company attending to some business connected with my duties when the door of the general manager's private office opened and a man came out whose face was familiar to me. He was well dressed and presented altogether an appearance of prosperity. Seeing me, he walked up to me with outstretched hand and a peculiar smile on his face.

"I can't place you," I said, looking at him inquiringly.
"Can't you? You ought to remember me. You put me off your train one day for not paying my fare."

Gradually it came to me that he was the seedy deadhead. My impressions of him as he was in his good clothes slowly faded into what he was when I put him off. Then he gave me an explanation.

"I am a detective of the company. I wanted an excuse to go into the town which I suspected had harbored the robbers of your train. The best way I could think of and one well calculated to secure the sympathy and confidence of the townspeople was to get put off the train there for not paying my fare. I stayed with them three weeks and organized a gang to rob another train. That's how I got on to 'he culprits.'"

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, OFFICE OF INDIAN AFFAIRS,

Washington, March 2, 1908.
To the United States Indian Agent.

Sir:—Under date of January 22, 1908, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Secretary of Agriculture entered into an agreement, by the terms of which the Forest Service of the Department of Agriculture is to make a careful study of the forests on Indian Reservations for the purpose of determining the best permanent use of the lands, and when they are found more valuable for forest purposes than any other, to prepare and apply plans for their management; to sell such timber as may be cut without injury to the forest, to supervise the logging under methods which will improve the forest and yield the full market value of all the timber cut; and to protect all forests on Indian Reservations whether they are being cut over or not.

While the salaries and expenses of men employed to carry out the agreement mentioned are to be paid by the Indian Office, all men to be employed in this work, together with those now employed in forest work on Indian Reservations, shall be a part of the force and shall be responsible only and directly to the Forest Service.

The Forest Service will observe in its administration the general policies of the Indian Office effecting the welfare of the Indians; for instance, the employment of Indian labor, and keeping liquor away from the Indians. The work in the woods shall be conducted in accordance with general policies agreed on by the Forest Service and the Indian Office, and shall be initiated and superintended wholly by the Officers of the Forest Service. In handling these lands the Forest Service will conform as nearly as possible with the policy, standards, organizations, and methods of similar work on the National Forests. As far as possible, the Indian Reservations will be put under the supervision of Forest officers in charge of neighboring National Forests but where this is impossible, as in Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan, other officers will be assigned to this work by the Forest Service. The work of the officers on the reservation will be inspected by the inspectors of the Forest Service, now organized in six districts for the inspection of National Forests.

All correspondence and all matters relating in any way to timber contracts or timber or log sales, or logging operations or the men who handle timber work, shall in the future be reported to the Forester, Forest Service, Washington, D. C. Any correspondence of the nature referred to which is received by any officer of the Indian Office, except through the Forester, shall immediately be referred to the Forester. It is my desire that you cooperate with the officers of the Forest Service and render every assistance in your power to make the plan adopted a success.

You will furnish your timber employees and Government farmers each with a copy of this circular letter, and ask them to co-operate with you in carrying out the plan adopted.

Very Respectfully,
F. E. LEUPP, Commissioner.

Waldport Items

A large agate bed south of Waldport has been exposed by the winter storms. This bed has been covered for years and some fine agates are being found.

Waldport people were treated to a novel sight last week when two schooners crossed out over the bar at the same time. They were the Condor and the Evie.

Candidate J. W. Dunn was a Waldport visitor Tuesday. Judging from the pleasant smile he brought along he must be meeting with encouragement all along the line.

The "Friendly Club," a ladies organization here, is preparing a program for an entertainment to be given early in April.

During the Sunday concert the Yachats people asked to be permitted to hear the band. The boys marched to the home of M. S. Durbin and after calling up everybody on the line the concert was continued. The result was gratifying to all and the boys were congratulated on their ability to blow twenty miles.

What Do You Think of This.

In Oregon they are going after the whiskey traffic in a novel way. They reverse the order of things. Instead of taxing the seller or licensing the saloon, the buyer of strong drink is compelled to take out a license for which he has to pay $5 for six months. Saloon men are compelled by law to confine their sales exclusively to persons holding licenses, to buy, under penalty of a heavy fine, for selling to authorized persons. A feature of the law is that every six months a complete list of the licensed drinkers is published.—Malta Bend, (Missouri,) Qui Vive.

Unequaled as a Cure for Croup

"Besides being an excellent remedy for colds and throat troubles, Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is unequalled as a cure for croup," says Harry Wilson of Waynetown, Ind. When given as soon as the croupy cough appears, this remedy will prevent the attack. It is used successfully in many thousands of homes. For sale by Otto O. Krogstad.

Prof. H. A. Howell, of Havana, Cuba, Recommends Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

"As long ago as I can remember my mother was a faithful user and friend of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, but never in my life have I realized its true value until now," writes Prof. H. A. Howell, of Howell's American School, Havana, Cuba. "On the night of February 3d our baby was taken sick with a very severe cold, the next day was worse and the following night his condition was desperate. He could not lie down and it was necessary to have him in the arms every moment. Even then his breathing was difficult. I did not think he would live until morning. At last I thought of my mother's remedy, Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which we gave, and it afforded prompt relief, and now, three days later, he has fully recovered. Under the circumstances I would not hesitate a moment in saying that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and that only, saved the life of our dear little boy." For sale by O. O. Krogstad.
