The Military organization at Newport has petitioned the Newport Commercial Club to confer with the adjutant-general of the State National Guard relative to establishing a National Guard company there. The organization has a membership of forty, but their captain, Ralph Henry, claims that if arms and equipment should be granted by the state the roll could easily be increased to the full complement required by law. Captain Henry, who is drill master is a veteran of the Spanish-American war, and served three years in the Philippines. He states that the boys have advanced rapidly in military tactics and although the organization has only been in existence since last fall they would pass muster for a year's experience in drilling.

OTTO O. KROGSTAD, Observer.

I bought me a suit of the Sears & Roebuck brand, they said it was sewed and tailored by hand; they said it was woven of finest wool, and couldn't be torn by an angry bull; they said it was fine and would surely last, till Gabriel tooth his final blast. It was ten cents cheaper than suits I'd bought, from local dealers, who seemed quite hot and shed a bucket of briny tears, when I bought my clothes of the Sawbuck Bears. I wore that suit when the day was damp, and it shrank to the size of a postage stamp; the coat split up and the vest split down and I scared the horses all over town, for the buttons popped and the seams they tore, and the stitches gave with a sullen roar. And I gave the suit to a maiden small who found it quite handy to dress her doll.
