THE NEW YORK WORLD
Thrice-a-Week Edition.

The Thrice-a-Week World, now that a great Presidential campaign is foreshadowed, hopes to be a better paper than it has ever been before, and it has made its arrangements accordingly. Its news service covers the entire globe, and it reports everything fully, promptly and accurately. It is the only newspaper, not a daily, which is as good as a daily, and which will keep you as completely informed of what is happening throughout the world.

A special feature of the Thrice-a-Week World has always been its serial fiction. It publishes novels by the best authors in the world, novels which in book form sell for $1.50 apiece, and its high standard in this respect will be maintained in the future as in the past.

The Thrice-a-Week World's regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and THE LEADER together for one year for $1.70. The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.50.

A TRAVELING MAN'S EXPERIENCE.

"I must tell you my experience on an East bound O. R. & N. train from Pendleton to LaGrande, Ore., writes Sam A. Garber, a well known traveling man. "I was in the smoking department with some other traveling men when one of them went out into the coach and said, 'There is a woman sick unto death in the car, I at once got up and went out, found her very ill with cramp colic, her hands and arms were drawn up so you could not straighten them, and with a death like look on her face. Two or three ladies were working with her and giving her whiskey. I went to my suit case and got a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy (I never travel without it), ran to the water tank, put a double dose of the medicine in the glass, poured some water into it and stirred it with a pencil; then I had quite a time to get the ladies to let me give it to her, but I succeeded. I could at once see the effect and I worked with her, rubbing her hands, and in twenty minutes I gave her another dose. By this time we were almost into LaGrande, where I was to leave the train. I gave the bottle to the husband to be used in case another dose should be needed, but by the time the train ran into LaGrande she was all right, and I received the thanks of every passenger in the car.' Important Messages Delayed.

All this week the telegraph and telephone lines from Newport have been interrupted, presumably by the transmogrification of the aerial electrical current caused by the conjunction of the comet seen by the Newport correspondent of the Associated Press last week, with a fluid extract of Shaws Malt from the old K-C drug store at that place.

The up-to-date telegraphical correspondent of the LEADER, strictly onto his job to gather the news, caught these messages as they were wandering around through void and blankness, and put them on cold storage in George Hall's near-beer dugout and saved them nice and fresh until we could present them nice and fresh to our readers. We herewith present such of them as we have space for:

Newport, Or., Sept. 6.—(Special to Ass. Press) This is Sunday at Newport. Your correspondent looked in the almanac and asked Pete Abbey and Major Hopkins if it was not Sunday this morning, and these two gentlemen expressing some doubt they in company with your correspondent inspected the front doors of the booze forts and found them locked. Yes, it is Sunday in Newport.

MESSAGE TWO:

Newport, Or., Sept. 7.—(Special to Ass. Press.) The man who seen the comet at Newport in the middle of the day last week was brought to town and examined by a board of physicians consisting of Simon Lenten, Fred Olsson and Charles Winant. It was found that upon close examination the man wore one glass eye and was cross-eyed in the other, and his good eye caught the reflection from the sun off the glass in the other eye, which reflection he naturally mistook for a comet. In fact since Newport went wet several of her good citizens have been able to see comets in the middle of the day.

MESSAGE THREE

Newport, Or., Sept. 7.—(Special to Any old Press.) The applications for enrollment in the high school at Newport still continue to roll in. Prominent among the pupils from Kernville who are expected to attend are Jimmie Robertson, Joe Sijota and Johnny Lloyd. From Bald Mountain, Willie Smith expects to come for a business course, and others are also expected. While among the young ladies from over the county who are expected to attend are Cory Smith of Waldport, and Lou Fuller of Siletz.

MESSAGE FOUR

Newport, Or., Sept. 8.—(To the Associated Hay Press.) The narrow escape of the heliograph man on Table Mountain from cougars as told by your correspondent in a special dispatch last week, was far excelled by a blood curdling affair in the north part of the county this week. Lem Stratton, a stalwart homesteader who is holding down a homestead on Euchre Mountain was attacked one day last week by a desperate and hungry horde of mountain boomers. Mr. Stratton had just killed a fine deer the day before and had it hanging in his woodshed. Just at noon while he was eating his dinner of sour dough biscuits, known as "sinkers," and sow belly, he heard a deep, fierce growling in the edge of the clearing near his cabin. With every hair standing on end Stratton grabbed his trusty rifle and started for the door. Imagine his horror to see not less than 49—count 'em—49, fierce mountain boomers, not squatters, coming from all directions in the forest toward his cabin and smokehouse. One glance convinced Stratton that he could not repulse them in the open and he hastily entered the house and barricaded the doors and windows. Fortunately the fierce and hungry boomers stopped long enough to devour the deer hanging in the woodshed, and also the pile of stove wood Mr. Stratton had cut, or he could never have had time to barricade the house. The horrid crunching of bones of the deer and the stovewood came to his ears as he propped the door shut with his bootjack and stuffed his overalls in the window rendering entrance impossible from that source. All too soon the deer and stovewood was devoured and the boomers made a fierce onslaught on the house. From loopholes in the wall Stratton fired shot after shot from his rifle until his cartridges were exhausted. He then took his muzzle loading shotgun and fired buckshot into the awful horde, but the attack did not cease. With despair tugging at his heart Stratton poured the last of his shot into his gun and fired at the old gray boomer, the leader of the band. The shot rattled harmlessly on the tough hide of the boomer, but the only effect was that it seemed to enrage him more. Unless this old boomer could be killed or crippled Stratton knew his life was forfeited. He had plenty of powder but no shot. His days seemed numbered. A gleam of hope! Hastily pouring a charge of powder into both barrels of his gun and putting a copy of the Newport Mail on top of each charge as wads, he crowded a sour dough "sinker" into each barrel and made for the loop hole. He was none too soon. The boomers, headed by their leader, were massed for the final charge. With a prayer on his lips Stratton aimed the gun and pulled the triggers. A deafening roar was followed by two terrific explosions and an awful howl of anguish, and Stratton fainted.

When he came to about two hours afterward he was lying on his bunk and one of his neighbors was pouring water and things down his throat. When able to walk Stratton and his neighbor went outside and viewed the awful slaughter. Where the sour dough sinkers had exploded there was a hole 11 feet deep and the mangled remains of 48—count 'em—48 dead boomers were found nearby. But the old leader boomer was not there, and with a sinking heart the settlers returned to the cabin and propped the door. After a restless night search was again made and the old boomers' corpse was found in the limbs of a fir tree 319 feet, 4 1/2 inches from the ground. Stratton upon returning to the house and looking into the glass was horrified to find that his collar had turned white in a single night.

MESSAGE FIVE

Newport, Or., Sept. 8.—(Special to the Clothes Press.) A most delicate surgical operation was performed by two of our local surgeons this week that will no doubt attract the attention of the medical fraternity at large. A prominent citizen of Newport has for years been troubled with a wart in a prominent place. He wished the wart removed but did not like to lose anything, being a little "near." So he was placed under anesthetics and the surgeons removed the wart from its regular place and grafted it onto the back of the neck. The operation was fully successful and after the second day the citizen has been using the wart for a collar button.
