REVIVAL OF DICKENS NEAR.

Instead of Snubbing Man, She Looks Up to Him as a Superior Being. We are threatened—and there is no use any longer disguising the fact—with a formidable revival of the Dickens girl. An audacious milliner, in a thoughtless moment, reintroduced the "cottage bonnet" (familiar in portraits of the young Queen Victoria) as a kind of blinker for motoring, and the headgear, tied round the dimpled chin of a pretty young woman, reminded numerous elderly gentlemen of sirens of the '50s.

Like Yvette Guilbert, the first girl who ventured to wear the coal-scuttle bonnet had a success de grand'mere. The contrast was piquant, irresistible. For some time past the artists of the younger school have been painting crinolines and shawls, parted hair and cameo brooches—all the insignia, in short, of the young person of the Dickens novel and period. And now she is upon us in the flesh, and not upon canvas. The cottage bonnet and floating veil sweep all before them, the most devout woman hater is disarmed, the susceptible fall at one glance.

And with the Dickens bonnet will surely come a revival of the feminine manners, the feminine attitude of the '40s and '50s. It will be a surprising volte-face. Missy will have to put away her golf clubs and hockey sticks, and take to tating and playing the piano. Young persons with a pretty wit and a talent for conversation must henceforth sit munched, and their voices must not be heard at the dinner table.

Instead of snubbing and chaffing Mere Man, she will have to prostrate herself before him as a being of superior powers. One can foresee some diverting contingencies—until the heroine of another and more audacious period becomes, for the nonce, the fashion.—London Sketch.

A REAPER RACE.

In the early days of the exploitation of various reaping-machines, a field demonstration, usually competitive, was a necessary occurrence. H. N. Casson, in a recent book, "The Romance of the Reaper," tells the following story of William N. Whiteley, "the Charlemagne of the harvest field":

He was as tall as a sapling an strong as a tree. As a professor in the great school of agriculture, he has never been surpassed. He could out-talk, out-work, and generally outwit the men who were sent against him. He was a whole exhibition in himself.

"I've seen Bill Whiteley racing his horses through the grain and leaning over with his long arms to pick the mice's nests from just in front of the knife," said an old Ohio settler.

The feat that first made Whiteley famous was performed at Jamestown, Ohio, in 1867. His competitor was doing a good work as he was, whereupon he sprang from his seat, unhitched one horse, and finished his course with a single surprised steed pulling the heavy machine.

His competitor followed suit, and succeeded fully as well.

This enraged Whiteley, who at that time was as powerful as a young Hercules.

"I can pull that reaper myself!" he shouted, turning his second horse loose, and yoking his big shoulders into the harness.

Such a thing had never been done before, and has never been done since; but it is true that in the passion of the moment, Whiteley was filled with such strength that he ran the reaper from one side of the field to the other, cutting a full swath—a deed that, had he done it in ancient Greece, would have placed him among the immortals.

That ten minutes in a horse-collar made two million dollars for Whiteley. His antagonist, Benjamin H. Warder, was filled with admiration for Whiteley's prowess, and at once proposed that they should quit fighting and work in harmony.

Give me the right to make your reaper, and I'll pay you five dollars apiece for all I can sell," said Warder.

"It's a bargain," responded Whiteley. And so there arose the first consolidation in the harvester business.

A Study in Bed.

Artists can tell odd stories of the difficulties experienced in painting "fair women." A French countess, whose features were literally covered with rouge, said to an artist, who was trying to give a faithful portrait of her, "Monsieur, your colors are not brilliant enough for my complexion. Where did you buy them?"

"Madame," retorted the artist, "I got them from the same shop where you buy your own."—Tid-Bits.

Physicians Recommend Castoria

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First—The indisputable evidence that it is harmless; Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food; Third—It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. B. Halstead Scott, of Chicago, Ills., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria often for infants during my practice, and find it very satisfactory."
Dr. William Belmont, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "Your Castoria stands first in its class. In my thirty years of practice I can say I never have found anything that so filled the place."
Dr. J. H. Taft, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria and found it an excellent remedy in my household and private practice for many years. The formula is excellent."
Dr. R. J. Hamlen, of Detroit, Mich., says: "I prescribe your Castoria extensively, as I have never found anything to equal it for children's troubles. I am aware that there are imitations in the field, but I always see that my patients get Fletcher's."
Dr. Wm. J. McCrann, of Omaha, Neb., says: "As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine, and aside from my own family experience I have in my years of practice found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home."
Dr. J. R. Clausen, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "The name that your Castoria has made for itself in the tens of thousands of homes blessed by the presence of children, scarcely needs to be supplemented by the endorsement of the medical profession, but I, for one, most heartily endorse it and believe it an excellent remedy."
Dr. R. M. Ward, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Physicians generally do not prescribe proprietary preparations, but in the case of Castoria my experience, like that of many other physicians, has taught me to make an exception. I prescribe your Castoria in my practice because I have found it to be a thoroughly reliable remedy for children's complaints. Any physician who has raised a family, as I have, will join me in heartiest recommendation of Castoria."
