The County Commissioners' Court for this county met in adjourned session last Saturday, to take up the matter of re-bounding several school districts, to form new districts, correct errors in boundary lines, and transact other business which came before the Court. District No. 48 was made larger by taking in 23 sections, all outside territory except one section.

A new district was formed by taking three sections off District 39 and two off District 34. This new district will be known as District No. 5.

Districts No. 29 and 8 having previously been made into one district, was entered of record as such at this term of Court.

The Court, by request, ordered the County School Superintendent to have printed report cards for use of the teachers throughout the county.

Word comes from the big woods that our former citizen, C. H. Gardner is most happy and contented, having just finished a large storm proof mansion. Mr. Gardner has no fear of falling limbs and small trees as his house is made of logs that will average a foot in diameter and is sealed over the ceiling with logs, making a miniature forestry building. The spaces between the logs is all chinked up tight and then the inside of the building is sealed making it warm and cozy.

There is now considerable guessing being done by state politicians as to who will be the next candidate for Governor of Oregon. While the Secretary of State will fill out Governor Chamberlain's unexpired term, in the event of the Governor being elected to the United States Senate, still the next general election is not so far distant and fence building has already been commenced to corral the big prize. Among the prominent Republicans who have thus far been mentioned for the office are the names of S. L. Kline of Corvallis, President of the Oregon Retail Grocers' Association; Dr. James Withycombe, of OAC, Corvallis; ex-State Senator C. W. Hodson, president of the Portland Commercial Club; J. H. Ackerman State Superintendent of Public Instruction; J. W. Bailey, State Food and Dairy Commissioner; Dr. Andrew C. Smith, former State Senator; Thomas Ryan, of Oregon City, and District Attorney George J. Cameron. The Democrats thus far have given preference to State Railway Commissioner Oswald West; Mayor Harry Lane of Portland, and ex-District Attorney John Manning. The mention of the name of S. L. Kline for the highest office in the state is a compliment both to that gentleman and his home city. Mr. Kline has a wide acquaintance throughout the state and his position as president of the Oregon Retail Grocers' and Merchants' Association has brought him into personal contact with the leading business men of the commonwealth. Should he receive the nomination and be elected, there is no question but that he would give Oregon a conservative and business-like administration, while his loyalty to the Republican party is unquestionable.—Corvallis Gazette.

THE GOOD ROAD PROJECT

Elsea Citizens Waking up on the Road Question.

If the residents of each road district, fully understood the importance of the office of road supervisor, much more care would be exercised in the selection of a man for this place. In our opinion, the most necessary qualification, should be his ability to manage men. Second to this, his ability to properly handle the road work. For illustration in our road district, the last six years have marked a period of success. Under Supervisor Oglesby the people have been awakened to the facts of what they can do in this line and conditions are now in a fair way for permanent improvement. Men who several years ago would almost refuse to pay their poll tax are now present at the road meetings and are earnest advocates of the special tax. Mr. Oglesby has worked faithfully for the special tax, and now that the people are really awakened and see the good results of the tax, they no doubt will continue to vote for it for some time yet. It being understood that Mr. Oglesby on account of physical inability, would not serve another year, Mr. Tom Barclay one of the best road workers in the district was elected supervisor. Under the present conditions we anticipate a successful term for Mr. Barclay and hope to see the good work continue.

So voters take care in the selection of your man for road supervisor. See that he has all around ability, for to him, in the main, you will owe your success in road work.
