The Signal was set, cocked and primed and all that was needed to make it go off with a loud ker-bang was a small dose of his own thrilling literature, criticized. He says he never said it, and as he never said it he even accuses us of the same trick. But on second thought we cannot accuse any one else of writing the article that was published in the Signal. It was so thin that it was easy to tell its origin, and we would not care to insult any one by naming them as the author. It is an old saying that the truth hurts, and from the way the Signal squirmed around to get out from behind its statements, was very good evidence that the truth found the mark. He makes a loud holler about Mr. Crosno. We were not talking about Mr. Crosno, do not care a snap of the finger as to who is the Collector of Customs. We think ourselves that the office should be passed around. But the point we brought up was the point that it was poor policy for a paper to hand out clubs to enemies of the port which might be used to have the port closed. Of course he may have had an object in view when he made such a statement, but we have been unable to find that object. Again he strayed from the subject and mentioned the LEADER as having boosted the county the past seventeen years. Of course we boost the county; that is what we are here for. We know that it must be hard for a man who has fathered two papers, and watched them fade and pass away, and to have the third one seem ailing, to see the LEADER thrive where his children starved and died. He also goes on to brag about his issue of recent date, how the King of England sent for an extra copy, also the mayor of South Beach, and we say that if the mail facilities had been better it would have circulated farther than that, as we heard a disgusted citizen say when he took the Signal out of the office with his other mail the other morning that he wished "the rotten sheet was in hell," so Clark's got another knock at the Government on its mail service. He further stated that the cost of producing such an article was 30 cents. Surely he must have made some mistake in his figures as we can furnish articles like that at two-bits a dozen.
