Science AND INVENTION

The lammageler, or bearded vulture of southern Europe, is known by the natives of the countries it inhabits as the "bone-breaker," from its habit of dropping bones upon rocks from great heights to crack them, enabling it to get at the marrow.

One of the results of the recent exploration of the Antarctic Continent is the discovery that that lone and distant land, with its burden of snow and ice, is able to furnish minerals of value to the civilized world. Among the minerals is a very good variety of coal. Professor David, one of Lieutenant Shackleton's companions, who climbed Mount Erebus, expresses the opinion that there are many minerals on the Antarctic Continent that could be profitably worked from Australia.

The recent experience of Count Zeppelin's huge airship in beating about Munich, unable to land because of the storm which was raging, emphasizes the need of harbors for such vessels, and the German government has ofaccumulates at the top of the currents. There it grows into drops, which gradually become large enough to break. Every breakage causes a separation of electricity, the water receiving a positive and the air a negative charge. A given amount of water may be broken many times before it falls, and thus may obtain a high positive charge, and when it reaches the ground as rain it retains this charge. In the meantime the negative ions left in the air are absorbed by the clouds, which become highly charged negatively. The rain falling from these clouds will be positively charged. A quantitative analysis shows, Doctor Simpson says, that the electrical separation accompanying the breaking of the drops is sufficient to account for the electrical effects of the most violent thunder storms.

Desiccated Water.

Some years ago the water in Philadelphia used to become unfit to bathe in, let alone to drink, after even the mildest kind of storm. Everybody complained, says a writer in the Washington Star. One gentleman complained to Peter Burness, an incorrigible optimist. But he received little encouragement.

"Actually," I said to Peter one morning after a storm, "I couldn't

OLD COLONIAL DAYS REVIVED.

LANDING OF THE HUGUENOTS IN AMERICA REPRODUCED.

Two hundred and twenty-one years ago a little band of Huguenots came to a new land and anchored their vessel close to a rocky spit off what is now New Rochelle, and a short time ago the descendants of these men and women celebrated the anniversary of their ancestors' arrival with elaborate pageantry. Suddenly from their hidden rendezvous twenty canoes, each manned by two men attired like Indians, shot into view and pulled with racing speed towards the lower bay. A shout went up, and there moved majestically to meet the Indians a strange craft, white, standing high out of the water, and with queer sails bulging fore and aft in the light breeze. The Indians surrounded the caravel, and their war whoops were answered by similar yells from a band of about fifty Indians on shore.

ferred a competition for plans for harbors of that kind, in the form of sheds of re-enforced concrete, fitted with doors at the ends large enough to open out the entire frontage for the reception of an airship in distress. It is recognized that chains of such refuges must be erected across the country in order to make navigation with the Zeppelin type of dirigible balloons a success.

Chief Engineer Burgess of the Honduras National Railway, giving advice to engineers working in the tropics, says emphatically, "Don't get lost!" He adds that a man should no more think of going into a tropical forest without a compass than of going alone to sea without one. Without a compass one has no way of getting his direction. In a few minutes he is turned round. The sun can only be seen, if at all, when directly overhead. There is no moss on the trees to serve for a guide. Distant elevations, or mountains, if any exist, cannot be seen on account of the density of the forest. Even on the treeless llanos of South America, where the mountains are too distant to be seen, the compass is the only guide. One can tell the direction of east and west at sunrise and sunset, but in the middle of the day the sun is useless as a guide, because it is almost directly overhead, and often one may stand in the shadow of his own hat.

Dr. G. C. Simpson proposes a new theory of the origin of the electricity of rain in thunderstorms. In such storms ascending air-currents carry up large amounts of moisture which take a bath to-day on account of the muddy water. It was like brown paste.

"Oh, I took a good long bath," said Peter. "When the Schuykill water is like that it is the best thing in the world to bathe in. So medicinal, you know. Better than Homburg or Marienbad or any of those places."

"But it's so muddy," says I. "That's just the point," said Peter. "It's medicinal mud, full of all sorts of phosphates and things. To-night when you get home fill your bath, jump in and splash about; but afterward don't use any towels."

"No towels?" I objected. "There's a much better way than towels," said Peter. "Stand before the radiator and let the water dry on your body. Then brush it off with a whisk-broom."

She Defined It.

They were discussing men. One lady asked Aunt Sophia if she knew the meaning of the expression "An average man."

"Of course I do," she promptly replied. "An average man is one who smiles and looks pleasant all day at the office, and when he comes home acts as cross as a bear with a sore head in order to keep up the average."

Sociologist—Do you have much trouble keeping down expenses? The Toller—Not so much as keeping up the revenue.—Milwaukee Journal.

Even a very tall man may not come near up to your expectations.
