Juror Quits Work at Sunset Friday

NEW YORK.—Superior Court Justice Lehman said the other day that a situation which confronted him in the county court house was unique in his experience, although there have always been possibilities of it in connection with juries deliberating on Friday night.
Judge Lehman and a jury had been hearing for several days a suit of George Rae against the Pioneer Fruit company to recover $10,000 on a contract for services. The case went to the jury about four o'clock the jury day afternoon. At six o'clock the jury had not yet reached a verdict and Justice Lehman sent in word that they might remain until about eight o'clock and then sign a sealed verdict.
Juror No. 11, who was John M. Carver, told the court officer that under no circumstances would he remain after six o'clock because he was a Seventh Day Adventist, and as it was sundown his Sabbath had begun. "Why is it you refuse to continue longer with this jury?" asked the court. "I cannot continue here any longer because it is against my conscience," said Mr. Carver. "Not only would it be a violation of my religious vows to sign any paper on the Sabbath, but I am not permitted even to deliberate or to consider any matter outside of my religion."

"Then I shall have to excuse you," said the court.
Justice Lehman then asked Emil Schultze and a member of John B. Stanchfield's law firm, who were counsel in the case, what they wanted to do, and they agreed to accept the verdict of the other 11.
Word was then sent to the jury room accordingly, but the court attendant came hurrying back with the message that two Hebrews on the jury had notified him that their Sabbath had begun at sundown and that they couldn't sign any paper after six o'clock.

"I am a Jew myself," Justice Lehman said, "but I have to lay aside my religious beliefs for my public duties."
The two jurors then told the court that if he would remain with them for several hours in order that they might agree, if possible, and obviate the necessity of signing a sealed verdict, they would go back to the jury room. The court consented.

Here's the Champion of All Lazy Men

CHICAGO.—The great West side lost one of its most picturesque citizens—temporarily—the other day. Gustave Schillinger, who existed—it would be rank hyperbole to use a word implying so much activity as "lived" in Gustave's connection—at 1466 North Paulina street, was sentenced by Judge Goodnow to the bridewell for six months.

Before sending him away Judge Goodnow paid a tribute to Gustave for his unexampled skill in loafing. "You are the most monumental example of lazy man it has ever been my privilege to meet," said the court. "You are one of those fellows who were born tired and never got rested." Persons ambitious to fill Schillinger's championship, now that he has been condemned to toil, may well pause as they consider his achievements as they were brought out in court.
Here are some of the records:
For nine years he has done absolutely no work, except what he was compelled to do at the bridewell.

During these nine years his wife and eight children provided him with food, clothes and spending money, while his mother provided him with a house, rent free.
It was his custom to wake up late in the morning and send for his breakfast. If there was no money in the house for food, he would send one of his children to his mother with a note asking for 25 or 50 cents.
If his mother happened to be out of funds, he arose and got work for the children, stringing beads. The children could earn from 25 to 50 cents a day at this work. Schillinger never strung any beads himself. He got a comfortable chair and bossed the job.

Hole in the Snow All That Was Left

KANSAS CITY.—Twenty-three thousand dollars had been stolen from a hiding place on the river front near the foot of Gillis street. There's no doubt the big robbery was committed. The hole is there. You may see for yourself. The snow had been scraped away and the dirt thrown to all sides, indicating that the robbers worked hurriedly when they looted Frank Wyant's cache near his home at the foot of Gillis street.
Wyant gave the first news of the robbery to Judge Porterfield in the juvenile court the other morning when he was up for failing to provide shoes for his ten-year-old son, Jesse, and to pay the boy's board.

Wyant is a laborer, a ditch digger and garbage hauler, who made $23,000 in cash, besides notes and real estate, by squatting on valuable switching property in the East Bottoms.

"It's gone. All gone, judge," Wyant whispered. "I had it hidden in a hole—took it out of the bank and put it there. You can see the hole down there now, judge, where they stole it from."
Judge Porterfield said he did not believe the story, and his position was substantiated by a probation officer who said Wyant's neighbors had seen him dig the hole on the river bank and then walk away from it. They did not know why he had dug the hole and left it open.

Muzzle on a Goat Ends a Ticket Feast

MINNEAPOLIS.—Eating his way M through trolley ropes and wires into the affections of hundreds of Minneapolis street railway employes, "Near Stop Billy," goat mascot of the street railway system, has lost his prestige by an overt and underhanded act which came near costing a score of conductors their positions with the street railway company.

For two months conductors who have hung their coats in the lounging room at the shop have been missing transfers. Whole books of transfers have disappeared from pockets. The men have been rebuked by the company heads. They have been unable to explain.

usual tribute of rope and wire he was seized by the men he had counted his friends. Despite his struggles he was thrown to the floor, and there, while he bleated for mercy, he was forced to undergo the only real humiliation a goat knows. He was muzzled.

Late the other day Conductor Welch hung his coat on a hook in the lounging room and hid behind the door. "Near Stop Billy" entered the room, sniffed at the coat, looked around the room, stuck his nose in the coat pocket, extracted a transfer book, ate it, and walked sedately out.
Later when "Near Stop Billy" walked into the car shops expecting his

Then, as additional punishment, Billy was thrown inside a roll of tar felt paper, the kind he had been served for dessert on holidays in the old days. Billy couldn't eat the paper, he couldn't even lick the tar. When he was finally released he lowered his head and made straight for the door. The door was closed. Billy went through. He is still going, or was, according to the latest bulletin which Conductor Welch posted in the shops.

Stimulate Children?

Ask your doctor how often he prescribes an alcoholic stimulant for children. He will probably say, "Very, very rarely." Ask him how often he prescribes a tonic for them. He will probably answer, "Very, very frequently." Then ask him about Ayer's Sarsaparilla as a strong and safe tonic for the young. Not a drop of alcohol in it.

Always keep a box of Ayer's Pills in the house. Just one pill at bedtime, now and then, will ward off many an attack of biliousness, indigestion, sick-headache. How many years has your doctor known these pills? Ask him all about them.

Careless.
At the mixed court recently a charge of arson was preferred against a shopkeeper whose premises are situated in Woosung road. After evidence had been adduced the accused was discharged, says the North China Daily News. His assistant, who was also before the court, received six weeks' imprisonment for carelessness in connection with the outbreak.

Peasant Woman in Hard Luck.
A peasant woman of Budapest, Hungary, drew $40 from a savings bank, and, on her way home, bought a tame hare for her children. For safety she tethered the hare with a handkerchief in which she had rolled the notes, but the animal managed to get away—tether and money and all. The poor woman in her despair hanged herself next day.

Monarch's Fine Library.
The library of Philip the Good of Burgundy, in the fifteenth century, surpassed all other European book collections of the time. It contained nearly 10,000 volumes, all richly illuminated on vellum, with bindings of damask satin and velvet incrustured by jewels, with clasps of gold and gems. Bruges, where the ducal court was held, was filled with literary craftsmen, and certain of their splendid productions are still to be seen in the Belgian royal library.
