Last Wednesday as the steamer Truant was leaving for down river Jack Fogarty, engineer and one of the owners of the boat, got his arm entangled in the machinery and was badly cut and bruised. His call for help brought Mrs. Fogarty, who was in the cabin. She attempted to stop the engines, but threw the throttle the wrong way and made the engine go faster. She called to Frank Fogarty, who was in the pilot house, and he quickly stopped the machinery, thus probably saving Jack's life. His arm is in an awful shape and it will be many weeks before he will be able for duty again.
