How Does It Get Across?
 At a certain eastern university one of the professors was conducting an examination in physiology. He asked for a description of the circulation at the extremities, meaning, of course, the capillary circulation. The youth he called upon evidently did not know much about the matter, for he replied that the blood went down one leg and up the other!—Youth's Companion.

Sound Education in Finland.
 In the rudiments of a sound education the Finnish people are unsurpassed. Practically every man and woman in the country has a working knowledge of reading, writing, and arithmetic, and every child of school age receives careful instruction in these studies. Every adult has a vote, and although 53 per cent of the inhabitants are women, there are only seventeen of their sex in the Finnish diet.

Banish All Skin Troubles

Remarkable Remedy That Works Wonders Against Eczema and All Rash

If you have been fighting some blood trouble, some skin disease, call it eczema, lupus, psoriasis, malaria, or what you will, there is but one sure, safe way to get rid of it. Ask at any drug store for a $1.00 bottle of S. S. S. and you are then on the road to health. The action of this remarkable remedy is just as direct, just as positive, just as certain in its influence as that of the sun rises in the East. It is one of those rare medical forces which act in the blood with the same degree of certainty that is found in all natural tendencies. The manner in which it dominates and controls the mysterious transference of rich, red, pure arterial blood for the diseased venous blood is marvelous.
 Out through every skin pore acids, germs and other blood impurities are forced in the form of invisible vapor. Beneath the skin is a fine net work of nerves, a myriad of them in which S. S. S. works with untiring energy to prevent the further destructive work of the acids and blood impurities. These are scattered into the veins to be driven from the system. The lungs breathe it out, the liver is stimulated to consume a great proportion of impurities, the stomach and intestines cease to convey into the blood stream the catarrhal, malarial germs; the bowels, kidneys, bladder and all emunctories of the body are marshaled into a fighting force to expel every vestige of eruptive disease.
 There is scarcely a community anywhere but what has its living example of the wonderful curative effects of S. S. S. Get a bottle of this famous remedy to-day, and if your case is stubborn or peculiar write to The Swift Specific Co., 160 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Their medical laboratory is famous and is conducted by renowned experts in blood and skin diseases.

GLACIER CLIMBING IDEAL SPORT
 MT. JACKSON

A MERICAN outdoor women, who are always looking for new worlds of sport to conquer, have been afforded a new and thrilling form of entertainment in Glacier National park, which Uncle Sam has thrown open for the benefit of those who like to climb glaciers.

This glacial wonderland, which was only created by act of congress in 1910, has been practically unknown. Americans have spent many thousands of dollars visiting Switzerland and the Canadian Rockies, in the belief that America had no glaciers worth the attempt to conquer. Yet in Glacier National park there are more than 60 glaciers within an area of five square miles, not to mention snow-capped peaks without number, rising to an altitude of from 7,000 to 10,000 feet above sea level. The principal glaciers in the new park are Blackfoot, Harrison, Pumpelly, Red Eagle, Sperry and Chaney. In these great ice fields there are many wide and deep crevasses. Ice avalanches come thundering down the slopes in warm weather, and under the chill coverings trickle chill waters, which form hundreds of beautiful cataracts at the headwaters of rollicking mountain streams where trout are to be found in abundance.

Adventurous Trips.
 The summer of 1911 was the first "season" of Glacier National park, but the fame of the land of glaciers had spread, and hundreds of pleasure-seekers turned to the new national playground which Uncle Sam will keep unspoiled through the years to come. Many women visited the park, and most of them refused to be left behind when parties were organized to scale the nearest glaciers. It is strenuous work climbing even the most accessible of the glaciers, and some of the women were compelled to give up before the ice slopes were reached, but most of them gained the ice in safety and returned so enthusiastic over the new sport that more adventurous trips to the outlying glaciers were planned.
 "I have climbed glaciers in Switzerland and the Canadian Rockies," said one tired but enthusiastic woman who had spent most of the season in Glacier park, "but nowhere is there finer sport than right here. There is such a variety of glaciers, and the surroundings are so beautiful that any active woman will find a whole summer of inspiration right here in Glacier park—and in addition she will benefit her health past all computation, for there is nothing else quite so beneficial as mountain climbing, in particular."

The woman who resolves to explore this land of glaciers should be prepared to "rough it." There are good hotel and cottage accommodations at Lake McDonald, a few miles from Belton, the entrance to the park, but when one strikes toward the mountains she is plunging into a wilderness, with few trails and entirely innocent of wagon roads. It is the primeval aspect of the new park that proves one of the greatest charms.
 Generally parties of climbers are formed and horses and guides are engaged, the individual expense thus being reduced to a minimum. The trip to Sperry glacier, nearest the hotel, can be made comfortably in two days. Camp is made at the foot of the glacier the first night. Here the saddle horses are abandoned, and the climb to the glacier is made on foot. All supplies for the trip have to be packed on the backs of horses. It requires about 20 horses to carry the average party and the supplies needed.

Many Huge Crevasses.
 Sperry is one of the largest glaciers in the park and its slopes contain many huge crevasses. Those who venture upon its surface must travel with extreme caution if the weather is warm and avalanches are falling. Generally the guide proceeds in advance, the tourists following, single-file, and attached to one another by a strong rope. No fatal accidents have occurred upon the glaciers of the new park, but the guides impress it upon visitors that no foolhardiness will be permitted. Sometimes the trail leads around crevasses half a mile long and hundreds of feet deep, or skirts huge holes in the ice, down which one can look and observe the water from nature's huge ice-storage plant starting on its long journey to the sea.
 Several days could be spent with profit exploring the slopes of Sperry glacier, and when one considers that, within an area of five square miles there are 60 more glaciers, great and small, to be explored, it is realized that the glacier climber cannot exhaust the resources of this American Switzerland in many seasons.

In addition to the pleasure of glacier climbing for its own sake, there is the satisfaction of knowing that one is, in a sense, a pioneer. Glacier National park has been little explored. It is a primeval wilderness today, almost as it was when the Indians roamed across it. Many of the glaciers have never been thoroughly explored. There are new trails to be made everywhere, and countless places where the climber will have the satisfaction of knowing that he or she is first to cross an alluring ice field, or first to catch an inspiring view from some high point. The park is from 50 to 60 miles in length and contains 915,000 acres.
 Besides its glaciers and peaks, this wonderland that has been opened by Uncle Sam contains countless waterfalls. In Avalanche basin, a remarkable U-shaped valley about 13 miles north of Lake McDonald, are dozens of cascades and cataracts, which dash from a great height into Avalanche lake. From almost any spot in the park, innumerable waterfalls are seen like silver threads against the dark background of pine.

Recall in Early Greece.
 In the palmy days of the Greek republics, many centuries ago, as historians tell us, when a man rose to such a height of power or affluence that he became a possible menace to the state, the citizens took a vote on his case as an "undesirable." This was sent to the senate, and, if the vote was sufficiently large and representative, that body passed a resolution in which the too distinguished citizen was invited, in polite diplomatic terms, to take a few years of retirement abroad—in other words, he was officially exiled for the good of the state. This was "ostracism," so-called from the fact, it is explained, that the voting citizens wrote their names on oyster shells, and it was instituted as a measure of security to the commonwealth. Any citizen of great wealth or influence, who had a large personal following which might, in an emergency, be liable to the detriment of the state, was unable to receive this distinguished mark of public consideration. It was a kind of primitive "recall," which had the advantage of being equally applicable to "ins" and "outs."—Christian Herald.

Rule for Candles.
 An old rule calls for as many candles on the table as there are guests about it, and it is a rule that might be followed with interesting results. There is so much variety shown nowadays in the way in which candles are placed on a table that the candles could be put one in front of each guest, in a circle or oval or oblong about the floral centerpiece.

For the Congregation.
 One Sunday a diminutive preacher exchanged pulpits with a pastor who was a giant in stature. The pulpit was unusually high and was reached by a winding stairway. He ascended very slowly and for some time disappeared from sight. At length the congregation saw a little bald head raised above the pulpit, so that only the eyes were visible, while the preacher announced his text in a high, squeaking voice: "It is I; be not afraid."
