MAN VERSUS NATURE.

Marvels That Are Wrought Through Synthetic Chemistry.

Nature, we may reflect, has a hard time in competition with the chemist. Her slow, laborious processes are one by one being superseded.

Her most delicate perfumes, which she dishes to us in drops, are made by the gallon in the laboratory. The infinite delicacy of her tints we stimulate from a material so unromantic as coal tar. We squeeze a cellulose product through a tiny hole, and we have the silk of the silk worm. We transform trees into paper and educate the world. We imitate the precious stones which Nature has produced by gigantic forces in upheaval, and the only difference, as was stated in our courts recently, is that the artificial product is more perfect than the real. Now the chemist takes starch, an unromantic material enough, and makes of it that rubber on which the wheels of the world go round.

In the course of his experiments man discovers a cheap method of making acetone, an essential of our modern high explosives. Somehow or other all man's experiments lead ultimately to the explosive, which again shows how we reverse processes, for, while Nature begins all her work with an explosion, man works up to the explosion as the highest expression of his conquest.—Westminster Gazette.

BEHEADING IN SIAM.

First the Victim Is Fed, Then Tired Into Giving the Signal.

An execution in Siam is an extraordinary business, according to a correspondent of the Chronique Medicale. The doomed man, awakened at dawn, is led in chains to the temple, where candles are lit around him. He is exhorted to think of nothing to disassociate his mind from mundane affairs and is given the best meal of his life, the menu being carefully chosen according to the social status of the criminal.

There are two executioners. One is hidden in some brushwood, while the other, dressed in vivid red, conducts the criminal to the place of sacrifice bidding him be seated on banana leaves "in order to be entirely separated from earth."

The condemned man is then put into position, awaiting the ax. Earth is put in his ears. For two hours or more nothing happens. Siamese law demands that the criminal shall bow his head voluntarily to the ax. This he does finally from sheer exhaustion, and immediately headman No. 2 rushes from his hiding place and does the rest. The executioners are then sprayed with holy water and otherwise purified from contact with the victim's soul.—Paris, Cor. New York World.

Measuring Nature.

Nature is not benevolent. Nature is just, gives pound for pound, measure for measure, makes no exceptions, never tempers her decrees with mercy or winks at any infringement of her laws. And in the end is not this best? Could the universe be run as a charity or a benevolent institution or as a poorhouse of the most approved pattern? Without this merciless justice this irrefragible law, where would we have brought up long ago? It is a hard gospel, but rocks are hard, too, yet they form the foundations of the hills. Man introduces benevolence, mercy, altruism, into the world, and he pays the price in his added burdens, and he reaps his reward in the vast social and civic organizations that were impossible without these things.—John Burroughs in Century.

An Uncrowned King of France.

The president of the French chamber enjoys an almost regal state. Every time he goes to his official palace in the Quai d'Orsay he is greeted by beating drums. Whenever there is a ministerial crisis he must be summoned by the president of the republic to give his advice. He receives what is an extraordinary salary for a French official—100,000 francs per annum. The appointment dates from the days of the convention. On Sept. 21, 1792, was held the debate by which the appointment was created. The first president was Petion, a violent Girondist. His six secretaries were also Girondists. It was symptomatic of the times that eight months later the seven were condemned to the guillotine by the deputies who elected them.

Presence of Mind.

Thus she reproached him: "Alfred, this is the first time you have come to see me for more than a month!"

Thus he explained: "Kitty, I've decided that when a young fellow can't keep from thinking of a girl every moment of his life it's time for him to quit seeing her."

"Kiss me, Alfred, dear."

He hesitated a moment—and was lost.—Chicago Tribune.

SONG OF THE WHALE.

The Humpback Is a Little More Musical Than the Bowhead.

Whales are rarely thought of as vocalists, yet according to Miss A. D. Cameron in "The New North" they really have a distinctive song of their own.

A certain Captain Kelly was the first to notice that whales sing. One Sunday, while officers from three whaling ships were "gambling" over their afternoon walrus meat, Kelly started up with "I hear a bowhead!" There was much chaffing about "Kelly's band," but Kelly weighed anchor and went to find the band wagon. Every sail followed him, with the result that three whales were bagged.

Among bowheads this singsong is a call that the leader of the school, as he forces a passage through Bering sea, makes in order to notify those that follow that the straits are clear of ice.

Walrus and seals and all true mammals that have lungs and live in the water have a bark that sounds strange enough as it comes up from hidden depths. Every lookout from the mast-head notices that when one whale is struck the whole school is "galled" or stampeded at the very impact of the harpoon; they have heard the death song.

The sound that the bowhead makes is like the long drawn out "hoo-hoo-oo-oo" of the hoot owl. A whaler says that the cry begins on F and may rise to A, B or even O before slipping back to F again. He assures us that with the humpback the tone is much finer and sounds across the water like the note from the E string of a violin.
