The Scrap Book

Stopped to Count It.
If the Englishman has deep rooted convictions regarding the "closeness" of the Scot the Scot has himself to blame, for he seems to delight in nothing more than poking fun at this alleged characteristic of his race or, at any rate, at a cunning quality which is often confused with meanness.

Sergeant Sandy Lawrence, a ballie of the historic burgh of Dumbarton, tells an amusing story of the time when he won the queen's prize in 1882. Sandy expected that his £250 would be presented two days later, along with the other prizes, by the Duchess of Teck and received with surprise the advice that he should proceed forthwith to the cashier. He went, and, finding he had to deal with a genial old compatriot, he inquired why he was not to receive his money from the hands of her royal highness. "They used to do that," said Sandy. "Why don't they do it now?" A twinkle came into the old man's eyes as he replied: "Successful Scotsmen used to stop and count it."—Pearson's.

Fate.
The sky is clouded, the rocks are bare. The spray of the tempest has himself to air. The winds are out with the waves at play. And I shall not tempt the sea today.
The trail is narrow, the wood is dim. The panther clings to the arching limb. The lion's whelps are abroad at play. And I shall not join in the chase today.
But the ship sailed safely over the sea. And the hunters came from the chase in glee. And the town that was builded upon a rock Was swallowed up in an earthquake shock. —Bret Harte.

The Daily Drive.
The late Pete Dalley, whose memory is still green wherever theatrical people gather, was a great hand for staying up late. He never went to bed as long as there was anywhere else to go. In the soft dawn of a June morning he emerged from an all night cafe on lower Broadway and climbed into a handsome, filling it to overflowing, for he was a very large man. "Where do you want to go, Mr. Dalley?" inquired the caddy. All Broadway cabbies knew the big comedian. "Anywhere," murmured Dalley drowsily. Then an idea struck him. "Drive me to the Polo grounds," he said. The cab jugged north, bound for the ball park, six miles away. An hour later the driver halted his horse outside a high board fence, climbed down from his perch and shook his slumbering fare by the elbow. "Here we are," he said. "Where?" inquired Dalley, half opening one eye. "At the Polo grounds. Where'll I drive you now?" "Drive me round the bases," said Dalley, and went back to sleep.—Saturday Evening Post.

Their First Meeting.
Mr. Harry Furniss tells a funny story of a high legal dignity, who, when solicitor general, had to appear before Queen Victoria to receive the honor of knighthood. "What am I to do?" he asked nervously of the official at the door. "Kneel, kneel!" "Suiting the action to the word, he immediately fell on his knees, and, like the funny man at a child's tea party, propelled himself along the floor on his knees. Her late majesty was overcome by laughter, all the more as when she retreated "the little man followed." And yet the little man rose to the highest post in his profession, and stood by her majesty's side as lord chancellor of England to read her address to the house of lords.—London Globe.

A Real Jelly Evening.
A study of Robert May's "Accomplice Cook," published in 1665, will serve to dispel the delusion fostered by many foreign critics that English cookery lacks variety. One of May's recipes is for the construction of a ship of confectionery, with guns charged with actual powder, and a castle of pies, containing live frogs and birds. After giving directions as to the firing of the guns, he proceeds: "This done, to sweeten the stench of the powder let the ladies take the eggshells full of sweet waters and throw them at each other. All danger being seemingly over, by this time you may suppose they will desire to see what is in the pies; when, lifting first the lid off one pie, out skip some frogs, which makes the ladies to skip and shriek; next after the other pie, whence come out the birds, who, by a natural instinct, flying in the light will put out the candles; so that, what with the flying birds and skipping frogs, the one above, the other beneath, will cause much delight and pleasure to the whole company."

Klem Had the Correct Dope.
Here is a good yarn concerning an incident of the Giants-Whites Sox tour around the world. Umpire Klem was judging a game at Sydney, N. S. W., and Sam Crawford was at bat when a fast ball cut low across the plate. "Strike one," sang out the indicator holder. "That was below my knees," said Sam with a shrug. "No," replied Klem, "your knees didn't come up when you were sear; you only imagine they did."—Lottie's.

There is certainly great improvement in the appearance of the right of way along back of the row of buildings since the removal of those old toilets this week. Now if the right of way can be kept cleared of rubbish our little town will put up a much better appearance to the traveling public. We would now like to see this property made a good roadway.

Mr. and Mrs. Hans Norgaard departed Monday morning for Silverton, where they will make their home, this Summer, at least. Thirty of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Norgaard met at their home at the Commercial Hotel last Friday evening and gave them a surprise farewell surprise party. The ladies of the Aid Society gave Mrs. Norgaard a beautiful quilt as a token of the high esteem in which she is held by the members of the Society. Mr. and Mrs. Norgaard have resided in Toledo about a year and made many friends here who regret their leaving. The best wishes of all go with "Dad" and "Mother" in their new home.

NOBODY wants to put a big, bulgy wad of tobacco in his cheek.

All around you, men are using the Real Tobacco Chew. And telling their friends how good it is; that it satisfies their tobacco hunger.

A little chew of pure, rich, mellow tobacco—seasoned and sweetened just enough—cuts out so much of the grinding and spitting.

THE REAL TOBACCO CHEW IS NOW CUT TWO WAYS!! W-B CUT IS LONG SHRED. RIGHT-CUT IS SHORT SHRED.

Take less than one-quarter the old size chew. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just take a nibble of it until you find the strength chew that suits you, then see how easily and evenly the real tobacco taste comes, how it satisfies, how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to be tobacco satisfied. That's why it is the Real Tobacco Chew. That's why it costs less in the end. The taste of pure, rich tobacco does not need to be covered up. An excess of licorice and sweetening makes you spit too much.

One small chew takes the place of two big chews of the old kind.

Notice how the salt brings out the rich tobacco taste.
