

MANY CHILDREN HAVE WORMS

Worms are a common childhood ailment. They make children irritable, nervous and restless, besides robbing the body and mind of proper nourishment. Watch your child. Examine the stools and at first signs of worms give your child a treatment of Kickapoo Worm Killer. They kill the worms, act as a laxative and expel the worms and poisonous waste. Tone the system and help restore your child's health and happy disposition. Only 25c. at your druggist.

WORLD PEACE WILL NOT COME

To the Editor:—While the world is reeling at the spectacle of civilization going to pieces under the blow of a cataclysmic struggle, and while "the progress of mankind" is taking up toward destruction at an appalling rate, there are some religious leaders and statesmen who persist in talking world peace and predict the beginning of the millennium at the close of this war. This Utopian's dream will never be realized. Lasting, universal peace will never come between the nations of this world. The word "millennium" signifies a thousand years, without any reference whatever to the character of the period, whether good or bad. It means simply and only a thousand years. In six verses in Rev. 20, this expression, "a thousand years," is used. It is a period in which Christ will reign with the just of all ages after they have been raised from the dead at the first resurrection.

Destruction, not conversion, awaits the world at the very time when popular religious teachers cherish the delusive hope of the good time coming. They see no danger, and brand as fanatical alarmists those who obey the prophetic injunction, "Blow ye the trumpet in Zion, and sound an alarm in my holy mountain; let all the inhabitants of the land tremble; for the day of the Lord cometh, it is nigh at hand." "But," says the Apostle Paul, "when they shall say, peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them."

The millennial reign with Christ brought to view in Rev. 20, is not on this earth, but in heaven, for when the righteous dead are raised at his second coming (1 Cor. 15: 22-24), at the last trump (1 Cor. 15: 15:51-54), they are caught up to meet the Lord in the air (1 Thess. 4:15-17), and are taken to heaven, where Christ is (John 14:1-3). Thus the saints shall live and reign with Christ in heaven during the thousand years after the first resurrection, or the resurrection of the just. But it should be remembered that when Christ comes the second time and gives life to the righteous, at the same time the brightness and glory of his presence consume all the wicked, so that the earth is depopulated and left desolate. This will be clearly seen by a comparison of 2 Thes. 1:7-9 with Rev. 6:14-17; Rev. 19:11-21; Isa. 13:6-9; Isa. 24:1-3; Jer. 25:31-33; Zeph. 1:14-18; and Jer. 4:19-27.

When the living wicked are consumed by the burning glory of the coming of Christ, and the "blessed and holy" are taken to heaven to reign with Christ a thousand years, the earth, left desolate and uninhabited, is called "the bottomless pit," into which Satan is cast and confined. In this desolated earth he remains bound for a thousand years. In the beginning the earth was "without form and void," that is, it was in a chaotic, empty, desolate condition; and this will be its condition again during the millennium. Satan, confined in this earth during the millennium, and having no one to tempt and deceive, is said to be bound with a chain. This chain is a chain of circumstances, circumstances which not only limit his operations, but absolutely take away his opportunities to deceive and destroy souls.

But when the wicked dead are raised at the end of the thousand years, as we are informed in the first clause of Rev. 20:5, Satan is said to be "loosed out of his prison, and shall go out to deceive the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth," as in verses seven and eight.

After Satan and all his rebel host meet their fate in the lake of fire which envelops the earth, a new earth appears, with the New Jerusalem as its capital city, Rev. 20:9-15; Rev. 21:1-5. This will fulfill Isaiah 65:17-19, to which Peter refers in 2 Peter 3:10-13. This in brief, is the Bible doctrine concerning the millennium.
Sincerely yours,
E. N. Whitlaw.

SO DOES THE OSTRICH

We have all read of the ostrich, that extraordinary bird of the desert, which dines on scrap iron, lanches on stones and when danger threatens thrusts his head in the sand and believes himself safe from harm, because he cannot see the danger.

Picture to yourself this gigantic bird, taller than a man, resting in fancied security because his head is hidden from view, although his body can be seen for miles around.

There are too many of us who adopt the tactics of the foolish ostrich. We are told of an impending danger and think that we can escape it or avoid it by refusing to face it.

We are informed that there is great danger of restriction of our facilities for local trade if our local business men are not given better support; that we may find ourselves deprived of the opportunities for marketing our farm produce in our home town if our store keepers find themselves stocked up with goods, but with no adequate volume of local business.

What is more natural than that this may be the case if we do not stop sending our money away from home to the mail order houses in the big cities? We must realize such possibilities and take steps to prevent them. If we don't, we will find out, in all probability, that our local merchant will look for other locations than in our town.

Which is the wisest thing to do—to look the conditions squarely in the face and take the necessary steps to counteract them or shall we, like the foolish ostrich, refuse to face the conditions and decline to take cognizance of them?

We can permit matters to drift along until the inevitable occurs, or we can think things over, carefully and with judgment, and take the steps necessary to protect our interests—the interests of ourselves and those who will come after us.

Our community is built up as the result of various interests, not the least of which is, the tributary farming population. Our town was created because of the various interests that center here and because this is a natural point for the distribution of farm products and merchandise. The sale of the farm products brings the money for the buying of the merchandise, while the merchandise supplies the necessities of those who raise the crops.

It therefore follows, naturally, as one of the unfulfilling laws of civilization, that if it were not for the farmers and others who produce things for the market, there would be no occasion for this community, there would be no necessity for the stores and shops.

On the other hand, were it not for the stores that are the mediums for the marketing of the crops, there would be a lack of facilities for marketing and farming would not be as profitable as we now find it in our community.

If the business men of our town do not afford the requisite facilities for marketing such crops as must be handled locally in order to give full advantage to the farmers, then the farmers will find out that they must look for a market elsewhere or accept a much smaller profit on that which they have to sell.

On the other hand, if the farmers do not do their share toward the support of the business men, by spending their money locally and keeping it in circulation in our own town, instead of sending it to the mail order houses, then the local storekeepers will find it necessary to restrict their investments in goods for the local market, thereby resulting in a diminishing of the facilities for getting what we need at home.

This is a point we must not fail to observe. We must look the condition squarely in the face and arrive at a conclusion as to what steps are necessary to preserve and to maintain the conditions which make for prosperity.

If we fail to do this, or if we temporize and let matters drift, we will find that we emulate the silly ostrich, until the worst happens.

Spend the money at home. Patronize the local business men. Keep the money in circulation in our home town. We need every dollar at home to help the community.
Let the ostriches do as they will and send their money to the mail order houses, but let us

Smile at Yourself in The Mirror

And probably several important things will be suggested to you. Your teeth may be decayed bad enough to interfere with your natural expression when you talk or laugh. Some of them may trouble you when you are eating or drinking. Again, they may keep you awake nights. If you recognize any of these conditions as being part of your experience, I wish to suggest that you ask yourself these questions:

First—Considered from a business standpoint, would not your time be worth more to yourself or employer if your teeth were good?

Second—Is it dread of pain or on account of the expense that you neglect your teeth?

Patients of my office know that dental operations are not so painful, after all. They know that I guarantee my work to be the Best, and they know that my charges are the lowest.
