PRIVATE CAPITAL IS WANTED

"Hey, You fellow with the idle money! Right this way and get first choice in building a railroad, developing an irrigation district, building a power plant, building a reservoir, develop a mining district. Take your pick from these good things."—Editor E. L. Beede, Drewsey Sun.
The above appeal comes from one of the remote cow-towns in the land locked empire of Oregon, a town once famous only for its nameless graveyard.
That is the right spirit on the part of the Press—pave the turnpike of opportunity wide, broad and firm, says editor Beede.

Governor Withycombe has made a strong plea that private capital be invited to Oregon and be treated fairly after it gets here.
Three-fourths of the burdens of enterprises in the commonwealth must always be borne by private capital and why not encourage this burden-bearer?

EASTERN PIRATES RAIDING THE WEST

Eastern politicians and newspapers during the past session of Congress have been bent on making political capital by the false cry of conservation of the natural resources of the west. They have done their best to tie up the water powers of the great northwest in such a manner that countless horsepower would run to waste for years to come. This is false conservation of the rank-est kind, for water once run to waste is gone forever, while if it was turned into power and energy it would not only utilize the water but save coal and wood.

You never see this same bunch of eastern politicians and office-holders saying anything about conserving the coal supply of the east or doing anything to hamper the industrial development of the section in which they live. They pick out the west to spring their political experiments on and buy their eastern votes with.

The last attack of these eastern industry killing politicians on the west has been the California oil fields. In the name of conservation they are now trying to dispossess many small oil operators in California of their land and directly and indirectly injure some 50,000 people engaged in that industry in that state.

The citizens of California rose up in protest at this action and a relief measure was requested and approved at the last session of the legislature by joint resolution, by Governor Johnson, Lieutenant Governor Eshelman, by the supervisors of thirty counties and by nearly three hundred chambers of commerce in that state.

Naturally western senators and representatives supported this unanimous request for relief for the oil industry the same as they supported measures under which the waterpowers of the west could be developed, at the waterpower conference held at Portland a few months ago.

Because the west will not sit still and allow her great natural resources to be tied hand and foot, unscrupulous eastern politicians now accuse western senators and representatives of trying to further a land grab bill in their measure for relief for the California oil industry.

After an investigation of the case, the senate committee on public lands has recommended a relief measure for the California oil men. Now these same politicians are carrying on a bitter fight against Secretary Lane, Senators Phelan, Works and Pittman for their efforts to gain relief for the oil industry.

One of the accusations made by the enemies of the relief measure—that corporations, with a combined capital of many millions, including the Standard Oil Co., would be the chief beneficiaries of the legislation—is disproven by an examination of a map of the district, which shows that 80 per cent of the land involved is held by 130 small operators while the remaining 20 per cent is about equally divided between the Standard, Union, Associated and General Petroleum companies.

Secretary Lane and Senator Phelan and others who stand for legislation tending towards the industrial development of the west deserve great credit.

Senator Phelan says, "I believe my relief measure will give the equitable relief which I think from an examination of the case, is deserved, and a greater development of oil will benefit the public by reducing its cost and check the monopolistic tendencies of the large companies."
