IN TRIBUTE TO

CLARK COPELAND

Toledo, Or., June 14th, 1918

To the Editor:

The passing of W. C. Copeland, at his residence in this city last Wednesday morning, removes from our community one of its best and most progressive citizens and takes from Lincoln County another of the pioneers who assisted in blazing the trails and building the roads that made it possible to live in and develop the wilderness of half a century ago, known as the Yaquina Bay Country. His death deserves more than ordinary notice for he was more than an ordinary man.

He was born in Harrison county, Ohio, in 1842 and grew to manhood in that state, but the call of the west was too strong for his pioneer nature, and in 1869 he came to Oregon and settled in what is now Lincoln county. In the early 80s he filed on a homestead in the upper Olalla, and there made his home for a quarter of a century.

In everything that pertained to the improvement and development of the community, he was a leading and important factor. I remember one instance of his work: It was in May 1893, just after the county had been divided and the new county was without money to work its roads. The old Siletz road from what is now the Dan Smith place, to the reservation line was in an almost impassable condition. Copeland and Frank Stanton, another one of God's noblemen, and a pioneer of 1866, had the only teams in that vicinity, they put their teams on the road, called for help from the neighbors, and worked every day for over two weeks, or until the road was in excellent condition for the summer travel. Neither of these men ever expected to, or did receive one cent for their work. This is only one of many instances where these two men gave days of their time, without pay, to better the condition of their community. I doubt if there was any other man in Lincoln county who gave so much of his time to building and improving roads, and without remuneration as did Clark Copeland.

He was a man of strong convictions and who stood by them to the last. He had many sterling qualities, chief of which was his intense loyalty to his friends. He has gone to his long rest, but his name with the other pioneers of Oregon will be remembered for years to come and will ever be linked with the early history and development of the Bay Country. Ira Wade

OLD PIONEERS
PASSING AWAY

On a bright June morning in 1870, the writer, then a lad of 12 years old, in company with four other boys of about the same age, R. H. Butler, John Blake, Len and Will Dundon, trudged merrily along a horse trail leading from the John Graham homestead, on the bank of the Depoe slough where the town of Toledo now stands, to the intersection of the toll road east of the Pioneer mountain, and leading to the junction of the Yaquina and Big Elk rivers—now the town of Elk City.

At a point about a mile east of the Graham homestead and on the Toledo Cemetery is now located, we found a crowd of homesteaders working the horse trail into a wagon road, as I remember there was present that day working on the road: William Mackay, John McGee, William Dunn, John Graham, J. D. Graham, William Dundon, H. P. Butler, J. M. K. Butler, John G. Blake, Joseph Black, Jack Frantz, Frank Stanton, J. S. Copeland, Clark Copeland, Court Stanton, John McCluskey, Lord Dundon, Will Dundon, Jr., and J. M. Robertson.

The writer's mother had just taken a homestead, the Toledo Public and High Schools now stand on the old homestead.

In those pioneer days men and boys often worked one or two months each season on the roads and trails.

I remember that the little school house stood in the side of the hill near the banks of old De-poe slough, near where the creamery building is now situated. All the children came to school in boats and canoes, except the writer and Ella and Mary Robertson.

There was about three thousand Indians on the Siletz Indian Reservation and they traveled from Siletz over a trail to a point on Depoe slough above where Toledo is now located. They kept their canoes along the banks of the Depoe and it was no unusual sight to see from a dozen to twenty five canoe loads of Indians passing up and down the bay, going to and returning from the fishing grounds on the lower bay. On account of the scholars gazing out the windows, rubbing at these great loads of Indians, the directors caused to be painted all windows on the bay side of the schoolhouse.

Of these pioneers that I met that day, my first day's work on roads in Oregon, having just come from the broad prairies of Kansas, J. S. Copeland, John Magee, William Dunn, H. P. Butler, William Dundon, Frank Stanton, Court Stanton, John Graham, J. D. Graham, John Blake, Joseph Black, Jack Frantz, J. S. Copeland and Clark Copeland have all passed to the great unknown beyond.

Of these old pioneers and home builders, Clark Copeland was the last to join the old pioneers on the other side. He having surrendered to the great commander of all mankind on the 12th day of June, 1918, 48 years after the June day mentioned in 1870. During all these long years Clark Copeland has lived among us, an honest upright man, true to his friends and his country, a good neighbor and a kind father, a man whose word was his bond, generous to a fault, with the courage of his convictions. Thus another pioneer has gone from among us.

The green sod of the valley is growing over the graves of a great majority of these old pioneers. The tall church spire and the white school house on the hill and in the valley marks the spot where these home builders trod the Indian trails in the days gone by. The little log cabins that sheltered our mothers in the long ago have moulded, rotted, and turned to clay. The boys and girls who played around these cabin homes have grown to men and women and are living in one of the grandest states under God's shining sun, made possible only by the suffering and hardship of a class of men and women soon to be gone forever, but never to be forgotten as long as men shall be enlightened sufficiently to wield the pen, and so long as our public schools shall teach patriotism and gratitude. B. F. Jones

LEADER

Makes Clubbing Arrangement With

The Oregon Farmer

Offers Unusual Opportunity to Its Readers

AMONG our large circle of readers there are a great many who are interested directly or indirectly in fruit growing, dairying and other branches of farming. All of these naturally wish to keep in close touch with agricultural activities throughout the state; and to know about any fight which is being waged for the measures Oregon farmers want and against all sorts of schemes that are detrimental to the people and agricultural interests of this state.

We have, therefore, made a special clubbing arrangement with THE OREGON FARMER whereby any farmer or fruitgrower, who is one of our regular subscribers and who is not now a subscriber to THE OREGON FARMER, will be entitled to receive THE OREGON FARMER in combination with this paper at the same rate as for this paper alone.

This offer applies to all those who renew or extend their subscriptions as well as to all new subscribers. If you are interested directly or indirectly in Oregon agriculture, do not miss this unusual opportunity, but send your order in now.

THE OREGON FARMER is the one farm paper which is devoting itself exclusively to the farming activities and interests of Oregon. It has a big organization gathering the news of importance to farmers, dairymen, fruitgrowers, stockraisers and poultrymen; and it has the backbone to attack wrongful methods and combinations and bad legislation, and support honest leaders and beneficial measures. We are confident that our readers will congratulate us on our being able to make this splendid and attractive clubbing offer.
