SALVATION-ARMY WAR DRIVE

Oregon's closest touch, with the actual war service which the Salvation Army is doing both here and overseas—a touch that has already been felt by hundreds of Oregon boys—is the splendid new Salvation Army Building recently erected in Greene Park, Camp Lewis.

John M. Linden of Chicago, who has arrived in Portland to manage the Oregon state drive for the Salvation Army War Service Fund, which opens Sept. 15 was present at the opening of the building and in discussing its plans, purposes and scope, said:

"When Camp Lewis became the great cantonment that it is, the largest in the United States, the government found that the usual fakers were swooping down upon the men with their well-known wares, 'hot dogs,' pink lemonade, etc. Such as these were the original war profiteers. To overcome this the government set aside a large tract of land for recreation and legitimate shops, moving pictures, barber shops, haberdashers, candy and refreshment shops, and in this tract known as Green Park, named for General Greene of the Sixty-ninth division, the Salvation Army secured a concession and erected and equipped at a cost of $25,000 a two story building, 50 x 122, the ground floor consisting of a pergola 12 x 50, reading and recreation room, auditorium with a seating capacity for 350, lunch room, check room, public telephone, writing and reading facilities, etc. The second floor includes 17 rooms for visitors, each room furnished with hot and cold water, electric lights and all modern conveniences.

"One of the prime objects of this building is to accommodate the visiting mothers and wives of soldiers and the 17 sleeping rooms are for women exclusively. It is the only place of its kind where women may stay over night for a nominal sum and if there were 150 rooms they would be full every night; The first floor is given over to the comfort and recreation of the soldiers, with reading, writing and lounging rooms with games, music and refreshments;

"While I was there a woman arrived in Camp to visit her two sons. That she was a real daughter of the soil was apparent. Her home was in the mountains of California, she had ridden 30 miles on horseback and then staged 40 miles more to the train which carried her to Tacoma and from there she came by auto to the Camp, radiant in the joy of expectancy, but the two sons had started only the day before for their long journey 'over there'. A Salvation Army lassie found her in a little cramped heap in one corner of the building sobbing her heart out. An added grief was her penniless condition, she had expected the boys to have a little money to help her on her way home. She was given food and a room and the next day a purse was made up and she was started on her homeward journey.

"It is for the purpose of doing such work as this as well as ministering to the spiritual and physical needs of the boys in the trenches, that Oregon is given the opportunity of contributing $25,000 to the $5,000,000 fund which is being raised throughout the United States.

WANTS HIGH SCHOOL

Mr. Editor:

Will you kindly allow me space in your valuable paper to exploit an idea regarding Harlan schools? Many will undoubtedly say, and justly, that these gloomy days of war are too full to spring any idea of expense upon the people whatever. Very true, but our school children of today must arise to the emergency to fill manifold posts depleted by this grumous war. Kis-met!

Some time ago the thot was canvassed regarding the consolidation of all the district schools at Harlan. I believe the sole obstacle was transportation. Then why not retain the "little red school house" on hill and in dale, starting a High School at Harlan of those who successfully pass the wine press of Eight Grade Examinations in our "little red school houses"? At this juncture, having gained strength stature and wisdom they may furnish their own transportation according to taste, viz. auto, motor cycle, poney or shanks horses. Is the idea not feasible? Perhaps not like a Jack-in-a-box. Again, is the idea not practical? Did I hear or did I not that the Grange women of Glide, near Roseburg, had successfully mothered some such project and carried it out too? Pray let me enumerate several good sufficient reasons for this long felt want.

1. Keep the boys and girls in the home a "little longer until their little wings get stronger".
2. Prepare them for the great National adjustment by Hooverizing talents, morals and health.
3. Keeping good farmers at home, not dissolving family ties to race off to the glutted town.
4. Keep the boys and girls practical in this strenuous age. Make the dust fly on the farm.
5. Cause the younger fry to get a move on mentally so as to join big sister and brother in the big school at Harlan.
6. So that the better favored cannot elevate their nasal appendage emitting such words as "I am better educated than you air" etc.

Ceasing to throw mud I would say that in view of the work before our younger ones still in the school, too much drill will not be found amiss.

Is the world growing better? I have at last received an inspiration that it is, not withstanding this unthinkable war. Better blood shed than rapine and noxious diseases. Abraham Lincoln said, "Here, without contemplating the consequences, before heaven and in the face of the world, I swear eternal fealty to the just cause, as I deem it, of the land of my life, my liberty, and my love." Furthermore, J. G. Holland penned "The man who loves home best, and loves it most unselfishly, loves his country best."

Why then not strive to educate as much as possible at home, not severing home ties, until forced to do so by existing circumstances. What child has not pined for home totally unfit for study?

Therefore, I believe reviewing the afore said that the cry of cost, lack of fine libraries and apparatus is over topped. Apparatus! Close your eyes and think back on our leading State Colleges and Universities. Bah! In the early 60's and 70's where were their apparatus? It "just grew" like Topsy. Friends and neighbors, ponder upon this and if it is not feasible, alright. Perhaps we've passed the "Wishing Gate."

WANTS TO KNOW?

Chitwood, Or., Aug. 21st

Mr. Editor:

We would like to know if that law that they have in Longbeach where they fine a fellow $5.00 per kiss and same for a hug, can be enforced in Chitwood? If so, there is one fellow here that wont have money enough to pay his fines, for we have seen and can testify that he is guilty of several of those long, drawn-out, sweet kisses on the back porch, the front porch and right out in public. Now we like those good night kisses and those good morning kisses, but it gets tiresome having to see them at all hours of the day.

Yours truly,
G. O. Qitt.
