

What Do You Read?

Somebody said: "Tell me what you read and I'll tell you what you are!" I find that farmers who read are mostly successful farmers. In busy times—and all times are busy on the farm these days—there are no moments for trash. There's no trash in THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN, but there is enough variety of articles and stories in each week's issue to keep every member of the family interested.

The COUNTRY GENTLEMAN

For instance, in that of September sixth, Dean Davenport, of Illinois, writes on a subject of vital importance—Getting an Education in Religion. Then there is an account of the recent tractor demonstration. Next is the story of the Best Farmer in North Dakota. Then an article on Handling Manure; another about Corn in the South; a discussion of What to Plant in the Orchard; a page of Handy Farm Mechanics; an article for the women—Home Comforts That Pay; The Home Garden; the Poultry Department—and a bulgy good fiction story, Reaping the Zephyr, in addition to the serial, The Plunderer. All that for less than two cents! And fifty-one other issues just as good. Don't wait!

Making Investments In Government and Municipal Bonds

Every man and woman is interested in investments. Interested because getting ahead in the world is a desire born of a natural instinct for progress. It is evolution asserting itself.

But, getting ahead financially is a hard problem for most people; hard because money matters are out of their line.

To occupy a place in the world of finance that would make our name synonymous with safe investment securities has been our constant thought and purpose. What could be more worthy than to give people unfamiliar with making investments, an institution upon which they could rely absolutely for securities that are safe and profitable?

Between the government, state or municipality issuing the bonds and the ultimate investor, we strive to give the greatest measure of service. First, we cooperate with issuing agencies in preparing their bond issues so they will be readily marketable, and second, we assist investors in purchasing the particular bond best suited to their requirements and circumstances.
