Somebody said that the world was going to end Wednesday the 17th, so consequently we did not make any arrangements to get out a paper this week. Then when they did not make good we had to get in and work like the dickens to make up for lost time?

The world did not end the 17th, but the first of January will see the price of the Leader at $2.00 per year. If you want it for $1.50 you had better get busy at once.

THE ST. REGIS RASPBERRY

Newspaper experts have advised us for years to plant the Cuthbert raspberry. I did that a dozen or so years ago. I have the Cuthbert yet. 10 years ago I sent 75c to a dealer for 6 St. Regis plants. I have tried with poor success four other kinds of raspberries since. Last spring I planted a new bed of the St. Regis.

As a neighbor's hens, (now gone,) got the most of my Cuthberts and refused to lay eggs in my yard, I dug up the plants. Shellfish? I'm not denying it. I commandeered an unused strip of the street, fenced away the cows and planted about 100 little St. Regis plants. I gave the product to Billy last year. He got $5 shoes, a $5 Thrift Stamp, W. S. S., and $5 otherwise on the dry soapstone strip.

Other boys got some. The waxwings ate all of the first crop this year and only half of the later Cuthberts. The plants bear one crop on the last year's vines and soon a second crop on this year's vines.

This year another Billy exhibited at the Fair. So did I. He got a blue ribbon, I got a red one, (second prize.) I do not know which sort is the better to plant for a market berry. I much prefer the St. Regis because of its long double season and the birds do not trouble the second crop.

I can give you, not sell you, plants of both kinds, also of the Cal. Super-berry, a fine crop berry. To can either sort I mash them well with an equal amount of sugar without cooking, which spoils raspberries for me. This year the plants are harboring an ungodly lot of mosquitoes or a lot of ungodly ones. Come and get plants at any time. I like to be generous with what costs me nothing.

C. M. Drake.
