ARE WE THE WISE ONES?

He was sitting in the sun on a pile of lumber. Beside him lay the kit of a vagrant umbrella mender and he had just unwrapped a huge sandwich of bread and meat which some hospitable woman had given him. "Good morning," we saluted cheerfully as we passed, for there was something in the sunshine that made us feel genial. "Good morning," he responded with equal cheeriness as he cast aside the wrapping from his sandwich and eyed the generous slices of bread with satisfaction.

As we sat down at the desk and became busy with the morning's mail we could not get the tramp umbrella mender out of our mind. Always there kept recurring thought, which is the wise man— the happy-go-lucky knight of the road or the chap who struggles to make something of himself and keep up appearances?

The first letter opend was a notice from the bank that a note we had discounted two months ago had not been paid and we were called upon to take it up. My friend on the lumber pile never knew the joy of being compelled to replace money he had earned and spent because the fellow that owed him had defaulted. The next envelope contained a bill for a considerable sum. True, it wasn't due, but it cited the fact that prices were advancing. Viciously the knife was thrust into the next envelope. Here was a good vigorous kick. A foreign advertisement in the last issue had not been inserted at the top of the column as was specified in the contract. Oh, things were breaking lovely this beautiful morning.

We shoved aside the mail and began to wonder if it paid after all to try. Wasn't our scheme of civilization all wrong? Which was the wiser—the tramp or the business man? The vagrant breathes the same pure air. He had his breakfast, minus the grapefruit, it is true, but just as nourishing as ours. He collected for the job as soon as it was completed. Soon the cool sweet summer nights will close over him as he lies upon some grassy bank, and gazes up at the stars while the chorus of croaking frogs lulls him to sleep. The price of gasoline has no terrors for him. He can travel while we must stay here and get out the paper for an unappreciative public. If he loses a dime he cusses and goes on his way. He doesn't have to take a bath unless he wants to and when he does he plunges into a cool creek and dries himself in the sun, while we have to scrub out the tub. He can just be his own lazy independent self while we must keep up the eternal bluff. If we never write another line for this sheet you may know we've chucked the whole darn thing and gone out to live as our forefathers did before they inaugurated this wonderful system of civilization.

GIVE THE WEST A CHANCE

The new water power bill passed by Congress and signed by the President means wonderful changes in western industries.

It means that five transcontinental railroads would move passengers and freight trains at greater speed and less expense.

It would mean building great factories in all western states and saving the haul on raw material east and manufactured goods west.

It would mean cheaper power for farmers and fruit growers with which to put water on arid lands on a scale that is now impossible.

But all these great possibilities for the west depend on the interpretation of the law by the national commission that executes the law.

The rules and regulations that are adopted to put into operation the practical details of the new water power law should be plain and simple and not difficult to comply with.

COMMUNITY INTEREST IN LUMBERING

The lumber output has recently been heavily cut by the shutting down of a number of mills and logging camps. Action of the lumber men and mil men was necessitated by the drop of the market throughout the Orient due to the exchange situation in Japan and financial stringency in Japan.

When the lumber industry is booming, business is good on the Pacific Coast. Any conditions which prolong inactivity in the industry automatically reflect on other lines of activity depending on the lumber output.

The present slump, while only temporary, serves to illustrate the vital interest many states and communities have in exerting themselves to help maintain sound economic conditions encouraging to general industrial development.

Local building activity helps equalize the situation.

ELECTRICITY TO THE RESCUE

The "Electric Home" idea is to be nationalized. Today electric appliances can do the hardest part of the work in the home and have largely solved the servant problem by doing away with the necessity of help.

Housework has been made easier and cleaner and drudgery has been eliminated with electricity.

Necessity has always been the mother of invention and in housekeeping electricity has come to the rescue.

Ford
THE UNIVERSAL CAR

The Garden farmer will find the Ford Model T One Ton Truck an especially valuable factor in his business because of the flexibility as well as the reliability of the service given by this splendid truck. The worm-drive of manganese bronze carries all the power of the motor to driving the Truck, and there are combined in larger and heavier form all the elements which have made the Ford Model T Car the greatest motor car in the world in point of service. The Ford Truck with its worm-drive is most economical in operation and maintenance. There is very little, if anything, to get out of order at any time; there is the simplicity in control; there is the convenience in the flexibility of the car, it will turn in a circle of forty-eight feet; it accommodates itself to narrow alleys, and it "stands the gaff" of hard work day after day, and month after month, to the great satisfaction of the owner. There is hardly a line of business activity where the Ford One Ton Truck is not really a necessity. Come in and talk it over.
