Ford THE UNIVERSAL CAR THE FORD ONE-TON TRUCK As a matter of fact we might almost as well call it a Three-Ton Truck for it very rarely carries a smaller sized load. The owners of the Ford truck take advantage of the high qualities of materials which are known to be put in the Ford car, take advantage of the high quality of Ford workmanship which characterizes Ford cars and they overload to the limit. Well, the Ford truck has never broken down with any of these overloads. It delivers expectations and double expectations, so far as carrying capacity is concerned, and while that is not fair to the truck, still the owners are satisfied. But the Ford one-ton truck, with its aluminum bronze worm drive, its greater weight and strength of frame and its incomparable power plant, is without a reasonable competitor in price, in service, in cost of operation. It is the lowest priced truck on the market, of equal capacity. No other truck on the market operates so economically and we believe there is no other truck that will give as satisfactory and profitable results. Our allotment is limited. Better leave your order without delay. A. T. PETERSON, Local Agent

MOVING TO AND FROM CANADA

Our Canadian cousins are gloating very freely over the immigration during the last year from the United States to Canada. They say 50,000 of us have gone over the line to settle and that we took over $17,000,000 of wealth with us.

Maybe so. But when we look up our own immigration figures, it appears that, up to about October 1, something over 40,000 Canadians hiked over to the United States with their worldly goods. At best, the loss of this country is about 10,000 people, which is only one in every ten thousand of our population. You can quickly estimate how serious the loss is when you reflect on what it means when one person moves away from a town of 10,000 inhabitants.

Incidentally, the 10,000 net that we lost to Canada is just about the number of people who moved from one western state to California last fall! Canada is a fine country, if you can stand the climate and our neighbors over there are a fine lot of people. We begrudge them nothing.

PERSONAL RELATIONSHIPS

Speaking of travelling salesmen, a business man remarked the other day that some of them didn't seem to be making any effort to sell their goods. They would roll into town, smiling all over, shaking hands with everybody. You would think they were capitalists going back to visit the homes of their boyhood. But in spite of apparent lack of effort, they would always get out of town with a good fat sheaf of orders.

"I asked one of those fellows the other day how he did it," said the merchant who was speaking, "Thought it would help me in my business." "Well, I tell you how I did it," was the reply I got. "I started out in this game ten years ago with the idea of knowing everybody along my route. I'd shake hands with the errand boy with just as much enthusiasm as with the boss. I took pains to know them all by name."

"I'd stop and talk business with the greenest clerk in the store. Not jollies and bull, but business talk and telling them how they could sell stuff. Now a lot of these fellows are store managers and some of them own stores, and all of them throw business my way."

"This little story of one man's success, may have suggestions for business men and ambition young fellows here in Toledo. The success of a business depends upon the number of personal friends it can make. Time spent in cultivating friendship with people who come into Toledo from outside, is very well invested. Every new face and name you can remember, every stranger who is likely to feel that his interests are carefully considered when he buys stuff in the city, means one more permanent customer for the store, and one more family which looks to this community as its trading center."

The people who buy in distant cities, and send away to mail order houses, forget the value of these personal relations. When they buy in their home towns or natural trading centers, they form relations with a group of men who value them as regular customers, and take special pains to please them. Such business friendships prove valuable in unexpected ways, and are often the means of opening up new paths to success.
