EXTRA SPECIAL---

For the coming week.

W. C. Burcroff Mercantile Co.

Almost everybody likes sweet corn and when the right seed is selected and the right variety settled on, it is a comparatively easy matter for the man or woman with a bit of ground to satisfy their needs from their own gardens. A book that deals most helpfully with the selection of varieties has just recently been published and should be obtained by every one interested in corn.

The new book referred to is Lilly's 1922 Seed Annual. Each year Lilly's—Western America's Greatest Seed House—has been issuing an annual dealing with vegetable and flower seeds, etc., and, as this firm has been carrying on a successful and growing business for 25 years or more here in the Northwest, the information it has to give today is worth much to gardeners.

Because of the distinctive climatic conditions in the Pacific Northwest, corn has to be selected for planting with great care and special pains must be taken with it if one expects to get a good yield. For years Lilly's have studied the problem of growing the best varieties of corn for this climate and their suggestions are most valuable.

Roasting-ears are no longer a problem to the man equipped with this information because big, juicy ears can be raised in almost all parts of this region if proper care is taken in choosing the right varieties of seed and planting it in soil suitably prepared.

The new Annual tells fully about the best varieties of corn and how to cultivate them for best results. It also gives a great deal of reliable information about practically every other vegetable that can be produced here advantageously. Sections are devoted to flower seeds and cultivation, fertilizers, sprays, poultry and bee supplies, etc.

All together this new annual is a book that every person who gardens ought to have. You can get a copy free from your dealer, or by writing to The Chas. H. Lilly Co., Seattle, Portland, or Yakima.
