A PRINTER'S POEM.

TO MISS KATHARINE J., OF U. T. K.

An S A now I mean to write,
2 U, sweet K T J,
The girl without a J,
The belle of U T K.

YOUTH'S DEPARTMENT.

CHILDREN.

One cold market morning I looked into a milliner's shop, and there I saw a hale, hearty, well browned young fellow from the country, with his long cart whip and a lion shaggy coat, holding up some little thing, and turning it about in his great fist.

By his side stood a very pretty woman, holding with no small pride the baby—for evidently was the baby. Any one could read that face in every glance as they looked at each other, at the little hood, and then at the large, blue, unconscious eyes and fat, dimpled cheeks of the little one.

"But really, Mary," said the young man, "isn't there dollars very high?" Mary very prudently said nothing, but taking the bonnet, tied it on the little head, and held up the baby.

Another day, as I was passing a carriage factory along one of our back streets, I saw a young mechanic at work on a wheel. The rough body of a carriage stood beside him—and there, wrapped up snugly, all hooded and cloaked, sat a little dark-eyed girl about a year old, playing with a great shaggy dog.

Ah, these children! little witches! pretty even in all their faults and absurdities, winning even in their sins and iniquities. See, for example, yonder little fellow in a naughty fit; he has shaken his long curls over his deep blue eyes; the fair brow is bent in frown; the rose lip is curled in infinite defiance, and the white shoulders thrust haughtily forward.

Then comes the instant change; flashing smiles and tears, as all the good comes back in a rush, and you are overwhelmed with protestations, promises. They are irresistible, too, these little ones. They pull away the scholar's pen, tumble about his papers, make summersets over his books, and what can he do? They tear his newspapers, litter his carpets, break, pull, upset, and then jabber unintelligible English in self-defence, and what can you do for yourself?

"If I had a child," says the precise man, "you should see." He does have a child, and his child tears up his papers, tumbles over his things and pulls his nose like other children; and what has the precise man to say for himself? Nothing. He is like everybody else—"a child shall lead him."

A PROBLEM FOR ARITHMETICANS.—A and B, two countrymen, came to the New York market with 50 geese each. A sells his 30 geese at the rate of two for $1, and B, sells his 20 geese at the rate of three for $1, at which rate the purchaser seems to get five geese for $2.

WHILE NOT better to use a SKIMMER than main strength in placing a stone over a mill-dam to stop a LEEK?

KNOWLEDGE MADE USEFUL.

In a recent address to the students of the School of Pharmacy, London, by Mr. Bernard S. Proctor, he illustrated as follows the idea that not only must the mind have received an ample store of useful facts, but all those faculties must also have received a large development before one can be regarded as in any complete sense well educated and intelligent.

"Some would be noticed by all of you if you regarded the figures long enough, but you would not all observe them equally soon; it would depend upon the innate faculty and the degree of educational development of the individual. The first thing you would notice is that the double column represents the nine column in the multiplication table; next you might notice that, if we place a plus mark between these two columns, and an equal mark after them, we should obtain a third column all nines, thus: 0 plus 9 equal 9 and the same with all the others down to 9 plus 0 equal 9.

A SHIP BOY.—A story is told of Gov. Chittenden, who was one of the governors of Vermont. He was an extensive farmer and in those days to be a governor did not generally interfere with the incumbent's vocation. He had two sons. One of them was a boy of bright intellect, and the other decidedly dull.

AN OPTICAL DELUSION.—Here is a neat delusion. Roll a sheet of writing paper into a tube ten inches in diameter, and hold it to the right eye, looking through at any convenient object, keeping the left eye also open. Place the left hand, open with the palm upward, against the tube an inch or two from the further end.

The first paper ever printed in America was established in Boston in 1639. One hundred years from that time the total number of newspapers in this country was only 200, of which only two or three were dailies.

FALSE MORALITY.—Never false morality. How exquisitely absurd to tell girls that beauty is of no value—dress of no use! Beauty is of value. Her whole prospects and happiness in this life may often depend upon a few gown or a becoming bonnet; and, if she has five grains of common sense, she will find this out.

A BRANCH CONCERN.—The limb of a tree.
