shivering in the chilling winds that swept over the broad prairies, Mr. O. Coolidge brought us strawberry plants, from his gardens in the open air, with nearly ripened fruit upon them. What think you now, ye inhabitants of the frigid and of our fathers, of the climate of the Webfoot State?

How is it?-How does the church building enterprise now stand? Is there any probability that we are to see a building erected on the foundation laid some time ago for the Union Church? If practicable, something ought to be done, for we observe that the foundation is rapidly getting out of shape through the effects of the weather. It is very evident, bowever, that Ashland has grown so much even since the foundation of the building was laid. that a church of the size contemplated would be little more than half large enough to accommodate the churchgoing people of the place, in fact it would be little more than sufficient to meet the wants of a single denomination. But it would perhaps be sufficient, in connection with the Academy, to meet the wants of the people ing a Christmas tree here. for some time. Is it not high time to take action in this matter?
