LOST.

I am coming with my dreamland; With my muse so sad and broken, From the vision land of Allen, With the image of my love— The darling one who left me, In her dear old log cabin, When we walked beside the river, And watched the slowly dying sun; And "O," said she, "Come back to me, My love, my own, my only one."

He pressed her weeping to his breast, But, while he kissed her tears away, The tiny red waves kissed the sand; And as they rip, led they seemed to say: "He will come no more; ne'er come again." He is worn and weary, with long waiting, For a letter once so faintly written— The sad sweet token that of would tell Of pined and aching, and to him forever, In the years ago we loved so well.

CALLAHAN RANCH, April 24, 1878.

Raised Him Out.

They were both old pioneer sage brushers, and had been breathing the air of Nevada for many years. They met in the Back Exchange saloon, and after sampling Al's best liquor, with drew to one of the club rooms for a game of poker. After playing quite a while with changeable luck, both of them got big hands, and the excitement began. Thompson clipped a twenty-dollar piece to the centre. Johnson came up lively and raised it $100. This was seen and $100 "better" put up. Johnson began to sweat, and "seeing" the raise, dropped an even $500 in the pot. Thompson cursed a little but his spunk was up and he swore he would never lay down such a hand. He came to time, and going down into his clothes, made Johnson's every nerve tremble by raising him $1,000. "I have no more money, but I'm worth $100,000 in mining property—is that good" he exactly asked. He did not own a foot in any mine in the state and Thompson knew it, but he knew, also, that he could beat him on an improbable bluff game, and nodded his assent to the bet. Then he said: "Old man, I have as good a right to put up my word on this game as you have yours. I own all this State outside of your mines, and I raise you with the whole state of Nevada."

Johnson grew wild with excitement, and frantically cried out: "I'll see it with California and raise you the rest of the United States! Now, d—m you, put up or shut up." "I'm coming," was the smiling reply.

"I have a title deed in my pocket for all Europe. I see your little bet with that and raise you with Geo. Washington himself!" Johnson grew pale, and throwing down his cards, pushed the money toward his opponent, saying, "Pard, you've got me, and it's your coin, but if old Jim Nye wasn't dead, I'd hit you clear out of your boots. Let's take a drink."—Elko Post.

BRIGHT HOURS AND GLOOMY.—Ah! This beautiful world! Indeed, I know not what to think of it. Sometimes it is all gladness and sunshine, and heaven itself is not far off; and then it suddenly changes, and is dark and sorrowful, and the clouds shut out the day. In the lives of the saddest of us, there are bright days like this, when we feel as if we could take up the great world in our arms. Then come the gloomy hours, when the fire will neither burn in our hearts nor on our hearths, and all without and within is dismal, cold and dark. Believe me, every heart has its secret sorrows, which the world knows not; and oftentimes we call a man cold when he is only sad.—LONG-FELLOW.

The original seal with which President Washington authenticated his private and state papers is said by a writer in the Educational Weekly, to be owned by Mr. Bashrod D. Washington, of Waukegan, Ills. It is supposed to be the seal impressed upon the death warrant of Major Andre.
