What the elections plainly show is a stronger tendency of the existing parties to arrange themselves upon a sed! tional division between the north and the south than to arrange themselves upon any question of public administration or governmental policy. The transcendent finance question is put aside by sheer force of party machine ery, and the party spirit that asserts itself with increasing force is that of former slave-holding and non slavebolding portions of the country. The party division that is still stronger than any other is plainly the old division of a "solid south against a divided north." There is great force in the femark which somebody is said to have made at Washington, that "the north has been slow to believe there would be 'solid south' in partyism, but when that belief comes, you will see a solid. north." The southern politicans are perfect idiots not to know that this would be the northern answer to a "solid south" party arrangement. They have shown nothing but partisan idolatry in their persistent endeavors to crush out an administration party in every portion of the south, and to restrict the representation of the section to a solid mass of antagonism to
