SONG OF THE CAMP.

BY BAYARD TAYLOR. "Give us a song !" the soldier cried. The outer treaches guarling,

While the heated gons of the camp allied Grew weary of bomb .rding.

"Give us a song !" the guardamen say, "We storm the forts to-morrow; Sing while we may; another day Will bring enough of sorrow.

They lay along the batteries' side Be ow the slumbering causon, Brave hearts from Severn and from Clyde, And from the backs of Shannon.

They sang of love and not of fame, Fo got was Britain's g'ory ; Each hear rec lied a different name, But all sung "Atfaie Lourie."

Voice after voice cought up the sung, Un line tender parsion Swalled like an an hem rich and strong Their butle eve's confession. Dear girl! Her n me he dare not speak,

But as the song grew ouder, Something on the soldier s cheek Washed off the stain of powder. Aid once ag in a fire of hell Rided on the Russi in quariers,

'Midet ecream of goot and baret of shell And be lowing of the morture. And Irish Nora's eyes are dim For a sloger dumb and gory, And English Mary mourns for him Who sang for "Antie Laurie."

Beyond the dark'ning oce an burned The bloody sunset's embers, Waile the Crime an valley s learned How English love remembere,

Ah ! soldiers, to your honored rest, Your truth and valor beiring ; Tue bravest are the tenderest, The I ving are the daring.
