to labor. Instead of being taught time. in such a way that they look down upon labor, the children in our public schools should be given a bias toward labor. They, should be taught that a well-stored, welltrained mind will not be useless to the mechanic; that it is as honorable and in most cases much easier to earn a living and acquire a desirable position in society through the labor of the hands as through purely intellectual occupations; that manual labor does not necessitate a life of ignorance; that culture and refinement are not incompatible with honest toil.

Let us have all the education and culture we can acquire. It will make better and happier the people of all classes. It will make stronger and better our government and lift us nearer to that ideal condition of humanity, "the equality of all men."

The case of Ben Holladay and C. Temple Emmett, respondents, vs.Simon G. Elliott, appellant, was decided by Justice Kelley in the Supreme court of Oregon last week in favor of the appellant. Ben Holladay & Co. undertook the captract of building the O. C. railroad and were to receive first morigage bonds in payment. After twenty miles of the road was built it was found that the bonds were werthless, and Holladay & Co. sold the road to a new corporation. Elliott, the appellant, held an account against Holladay, and it was suit was brought. The decision dissolved and that the appellant Simon G. The gubernatroial contest waxes warm in California. The friends of Glenn call Perkins a "bloated monopolist," and the friends of Perkins call Glenn a "rapacious land grabber." Both the candidates are unfortunate enough to be rich; consequently both must be obnoxious to the Kearneyites. Glenn is the candidate of the Democracy and the II. B.'s, and is generally conceded to have the best chances on his side.
