THRESHERS CATCHING FIRE.—The threshing machine of Frank Smith, of Douglas county, while in use upon the farm of A. G. McFee, on the Calipsoa, a few days ago, took fire, probably from overheating the cylinder box, and was totally destroyed, together with over 200 bushels of grain.

LOCAL BRIEVITIES.

L. F. Willits has returned from Jacksonville. The California election takes place next Wednesday.

Mr. E. A. Buick and sister, Miss Jennie, have been spending several days in Ashland. Ex-Governor Chabwick and others will open a copper mine soon on the Illinois river.

Ex-Senator Mitchell passed through town on his way to San Francisco last Thursday evening. Highest market price paid for wheat, oats and barley in exchange for goods at Butler & Rockfellow's.

Witherell & Carr have bought four hundred head of cattle in Langell valley for the California market. Some fifty or sixty miners are at work on Briggs' and Silver creeks, and a few are said to be doing well.

A colored man named Tom Shipley was drowned in Goose lake a short time ago by the capsizing of a boat. Jack Ireland, one of the Cottonwood boys, passed through town this week, on his way to Umatilla county.

Low Ross, son of Col. John E. Ross, and an old Academy student, was visiting Ashland friends this week. Misses E. L. Daggett and Ada Horton, who have been spending some time at Mr. Dunn's, have returned to town.

M. H. Drake came in from Lake county last Sunday evening, and will likely remain in Ashland for some time. For sale—Two hundred head of high grade Spanish Merino wethers, apply to Wagner & Anderson at the Ashland Mill.

There is probability of a race between Ross and his son, John, on the 1st of October. George Hubbard, an old resident of Jackson county, died of consumption at Central Point last Wednesday, at the age of 65 years.

T. H. Weston, of Tule Lake, who has been spending a short time in our valley, started upon his return to Lake county last Monday. A. J. Garrison, general agent of the Commercial Fire Insurance Co., stopped in Ashland last Tuesday, going north next morning.

Parties indebted to Eagle Mills are expected to do their best to settle such indebtedness before Sept. 1st. Cash or wheat received. Dr. Ream, of Yreka, has been visiting our county, and it is said, has arranged for the loan of considerable money upon real estate in the lower valley.

The annual conference of the M. E. Church, South, will be held at Albany on the 24th of September. Bishop Leamer, of New Orleans, will preside. Rush and Will Willits have been in town several days this week. They intend to fight in the winter on Keau creek pling of logs for the next season's saving.

Prof. L. L. Rogers was complimented at the recent session of the Oregon M. E. Conference by a special resolution of welcome upon his return to the conference. The central span of the new Rock Point bridge was laid on Wednesday, and the citizens of the surrounding country had a basket picnic in honor of the event.

You can find flour, Graham, cracked wheat, corn meal, bran, shorts, mixed feed, chicken feed, shoulders and ham at Eagle Mill. Delivered in Ashland at mill prices. Major Glenn and daughter, of Oakland, Cal., have been visiting at B. F. Myer's this week. They will spend a week at the Sola Springs before returning to their home.

Messrs. Snook & Merrill will go with their Scipitron gallery to Josephine county, and after taking the pictures of the people of Eberville and other places, will go to Crescent City. J. A. Leach and his son Horace returned last Friday from an extensive trip in Eastern Oregon, having gone as far as Prairie City. They passed through much fine farming and grazing country.

Mr. M. Powell will build two one-story buildings upon the west end of the lot purchased of Houck. The buildings are to be 22x28 and will contain four rooms each. Mr. Cartlitch will do the carpenterwork.

Will Myer started for Roseburg Wednesday morning with a pair of Jersey calves, a full-blood bull and a three-quarter-blood heifer, which had been purchased from W. C. Myer by some one in Salem. The brick work of Holt's new hotel building at Jacksonville is finished, with the exception of the fire walls. We understand, however, that Mr. Holt contemplates making the building three stories high in front.

Call on Dr. Chitwood and get a sample of the imperishable paint, which is becoming so popular. This paint may be had in any quantity, and of any color or shade, and is warranted to give satisfaction in every particular. Send in your orders to Bish's cannery. The fruit will not last always, and the orders that come in first will be first filled. The enterprise starts out with a liberal patronage, and many are availing themselves of its advantages.

"Uncle Billy" Hurst brought us a limb out of one of Mr. Rockfellow's plum trees yesterday, on which were thirty plums, averaging about 5/16 inches in circumference, all growing upon a space not over twelve inches along the limb. Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Myer will start for Sacramento next Sunday, intending to be gone several weeks, and visit San Francisco and other places before their return. Mrs. O. Coolidge and E. F. Rockfellow will also make the trip in a short time.

A wood-chopper named Charles Wagner, was killed by a stroke of lightning in the mountains near the Klamath mine on Klamath river on Monday last week. A companion near him was knocked down and remained insensible for a time, but received no serious injury. Wheat is coming in rapidly at the Ashland and Eagle mills, which are paying 60 cents a bushel for it. The grain, which has been injured by rust to some extent in this valley, is not so plump and smooth as usual, and from what we can learn, the crop will be a little short of the average.

In the appointments made by the Oregon M. E. Conference for the next year, Rev. L. L. Rogers is assigned the Ashland charge. Rev. W. T. Chapman goes to Corvallis, and Rev. D. A. Crowell is returned to Jacksonville. Rev. L. M. Nickerson is returned to Klamath, and Rev. G. W. Rork, to Sprague River. The contract of building the new public school house in this place has been awarded to Daley & Co. They are to enclose the building, lay the first floor, put in doors and windows and give the outside one coat of paint; for which they are to receive between $1,100 and $1,500.

Those who propose to attend school at the Academy this fall should not fail to begin when school opens, if possible. The advantage of beginning with the text is obvious to need mention, but any fail to appreciate it, judging from the struggling appearance in the past of pupils who could do much better if they would. The Crater lake excursion party returned last Sunday, after a very enjoyable trip. They camped one night at the lake, and returned by the Rogue river route. Patches of snow were found, but not enough to interfere with traveling. "Uncle Billy" Hurst brought us a bunch of flowers picked from the extreme rim of the lake.

Sigs Draper, of Foot's creek, recently shipped a load of goods from San Francisco by way of Crescent City. The road from this valley to Crescent City has been greatly improved of late, and as freight charges are less than upon the Roseburg and Reading routes, it is not unlikely that considerable freight will come in that way. On Sunday evening of last week the dwelling house of Abram Tenbrook in Lakeview was totally consumed by fire, together with all its contents. The family had retired, and were barely able to escape with their lives, so rapid was the spread of the flames in the dry wood of the building. The fire is supposed to have caught from the kitchen stove. A Sawyer's Bar correspondent of the Yreka Union says: "The body of a murdered man was found on the Salmon summit between Orelens Bar and Oliver's Flat. The body is mutilated past all recognition and the clothes of the murdered man all lie beside him, where the miscreant or miscreants sought to obliterate all traces by burning his clothes. Some malicious hoodlums in Phoenix have had the meanness to enter the watermelon patches of several of the citizens of that place, and wantonly destroy the melons, mashing all they found, simply for spite, it would appear. There is no excuse or palliation for such action, and a dose of fine bird shot might be beneficial treatment for the miscreants. Dr. Chitwood has imported from Butte creek a lot of the finest watermelons that Oregon soil and climate will produce. Some one accused the Doctor of trying to introduce cholera morbus in the town to improve the pill business, and he 'donated' us one of the best melons to keep him on this point, but we cannot be bribed to such sins of omission—we have come to this conclusion since we ate the melon. Prof. E. D. Cope, of Philadelphia, the celebrated paleontologist, will visit Southern Oregon in a short time to examine and obtain specimens of the fossils of this region. There is in Lake county a very interesting bed of fossils in what is called Fossil lake, and Prof. Cope's attention will be probably centered at that point, but interesting fossils have been exhumed in Jackson county, and the Professor will doubtless pay us a visit.

Opening Day at the College—A Grand Time Passing.

It is proposed by the management of the Ashland College and Normal School to open the school on the 15th of September with public exercises of a very interesting and attractive character, and we anticipate a grand time. Preparations will be made for the entertainment of a large number of visitors, and a cordial invitation is extended to everybody. There will be address by the President and Vice President of the college and various other exercises, one of which is the disposal of a collation to be spread by the ladies, in the Grove probably, sometime during the day. The Jacksonville brass band will be in attendance to furnish music, we understand, and nothing will be lacking to make the occasion all that could be desired. We shall publish a full programme in due time.

Various committees have been appointed to make the necessary preparations for the event, and they will no doubt receive the hearty co-operation of the citizens in their efforts to make it a success. The committees are arranged by the trustees as follows: On supper—Madams O. Coolidge, Jas. Thornton, J. M. McCall, B. F. Myer, J. H. Russell, H. C. Hill, J. R. Tozer. On decoration—Messrs Nettie Wagner, Nellie Russell, Frances Myer, Sarah Fox, Kate Thornton, Irene Chitwood, Messrs. G. F. Billings, Wm. H. Leeds, J. B. Russell, Walter Myer. On music—Prof. L. L. Rogers, Mrs. L. L. Rogers, Prof. J. Q. Willets, Mrs. J. Q. Willets, Mrs. Jennie F. Nichols, Miss Lou Willits.

On general arrangements J. M. McCall, Jacob Wagner, W. H. Atkinson. On ice cream, confectionery, etc.—Mr. and Mrs. John Fralay. Academy Accepted by the Conference.

In the report in the Oregonian of last Friday's proceedings of the M. E. conference we find the following: "The following preamble and resolutions in relation to the Ashland Academy were submitted by the committee on education, and on motion were adopted: WHEREAS, The property known as the Ashland Academy has been tendered the conference free of debt, to be conducted as the Ashland College and Normal School, therefore.

Resolved, That the trust is hereby accepted under the conditions of the deed, and the following trustees recommended by the Ashland quarterly conference be confirmed: First Class—For one year, J. S. McCain, W. T. Chapman, W. H. Atkinson. Second Class—For two years, G. F. Billings, John Walker, A. G. Rockfellow. Third Class—For three years, L. L. Rogers, Clark Taylor, Jacob Wagner.

Their successors to be elected for three years by the conference. The school to be conducted in conformity with our discipline and conference regulations concerning institutions of learning. L. M. Nickerson, Chairman."

PROF. NICHOLS' LECTURE.—A good audience greeted Prof. Nichols at the M. E. church last Sunday evening, and a fine lecture, which was an excellent sermon as well, delighted the audience. The subject, "Elective Affinities," was a moral one, and the professor followed the line of the regular Sunday evening discourse so far as to announce a text, which was "What God hath joined together, let no man put asunder." Taking illustrations from the physical world, the speaker exemplified the laws of affinity, and then, entering the field of ethics, showed that moral laws are as inexorable as physical laws, and the penalties of their violation as sure. Among the moral affinities illustrated, were the indissoluble union of idleness and vice, sin and misery, virtue and happiness. The duty of parents to inculcate habits of industry in their children, and guard against the pernicious fruits of idleness was strongly urged, and the grand opportunities for honest, persistent labor in this favored land of ours glowingly portrayed. It was a lecture such as we should be glad to see more frequently delivered in our community—of a kind that are sufficiently practical to take hold upon the mind and bear good fruit in influence upon the characters that are being moulded and fashioned for their parts in the drama of life.

Items From The Post. FORT KLAMATH, AUG. 25th, 1879. Weather has been very cold of late. Messrs Miller and Frim of Jacksonville are visiting at Jay Beaches. Jay Beach has resigned his post-relationship. He intends to remove to his place on Lost River the 1st of October, where he will confine himself to fancy stock raising. Messrs. Ferree, Worden & Thatcher are the new post traders, and John Gotbrod will look after their interests. Some fine potatoes and peas have come into the post, which were raised across Wood river. The boys are very indignant about the way fruit peddlars treat them. The best of the fruit is picked out at Linkville, and we have to pay the highest price for inferior fruit. James McFinnis has ordered Cox, Nickerson $100 bonus for the mail route to this place. Some fine horses are in training here for the races at Yreka. J. W. Riggs, the photographer has arrived in camp, and will remain three weeks. Big Ox.

The Johnson variety troupe gave exhibitions on Friday and Saturday evenings last in their tent, which they pitched near the public school house. They had good audiences, and their performance was very entertaining and gave general satisfaction.

Up Among the Clouds.

In company with three of the best hunters that tramp the hills in this part of Oregon, O. Coolidge, Bill Willis and Dick Roach, ye quill driver of the Tribune ascended Ashland Butte last week and spent two days hunting in the mountains around it. We found the snow nearly all gone from the butte, with the exception of a small patch in the old crater, visible from town, and a few little bunches in well sheltered spots. This butte is the highest in the Siskiyou range and is apparently about as high as any in the ranges south and west of the Siskiyou. It is very nearly up to the line of perpetual snow, as the "oldest inhabitant" remembers but one year in which the snow entirely disappeared. The red snow, which is supposed to exist only above the snow line, is found upon the butte most of the time, but has all gone now. The view from the summit of the mountain is grand beyond description, and fully repays the toil of climbing to its lofty brow. On the north side, which was covered with heavy clouds during most of our stay, the Rogue river valley stretches away upon its winding course until it is lost in the hills which rise higher and higher to where the Cascades bar the view. The Three Sisters, Diamond peak, at the head of the Willamette, Mt. Pitt and the depression of Crater lake are in plain sight. Upon this side of the mountain rises Ashland creek, the waters of which flow into Rogue river, and upon the other side is the source of Grouse creek and other streams which flow down through a famed mining country into the Klamath river. Upon the south and west of the mountain not a cloud obstructed our view, and the scene presented to the eye by the vast panorama of mountains and valleys, forests and streams, deep rocky gorges and towering peaks is bewildering in its immensity. To the southeast we see look down, for thousands of feet, until the fertile valleys of Siskiyou county arrest the sight, and the broad area, thousands of acres of farming and grazing land, seems but a narrow strip between the mountains. Following it down we see the little town of Henley, with its white houses glistening in the sunshine—little bright spots no larger than a silver dollar. Then a range of mountains crosses the view, and above or beyond it spreads the broad valley of the Shasta, from which rises the majestic, snow-covered peak that stands head and shoulders above all the ranges, a very monarch of mountains. To the westward from our butte the Scott and Trinity ranges present a perfect sea of mountains, which, covered with timber, are a beautiful green as far as the eye can distinguish the actual color, and then are veiled in the soft blue of distance, with a white gleam of snow glistening here and there upon the highest peaks.

On the third day we returned home, our horses loaded with venison, two deer upon each horse, and made the trip down from the butte, some twelve miles, in less than six hours. Strange and perverse are the rulings of the fates that preside over the fortunes of hunters. The green monarch of the party started upon and slaughtered two innocent deer within half a mile of camp during the first half-hour's hunt, while the veteran deer slayer, Coolidge, who has brought in so many carcases from the neighborhood of Ashland butte that he is usually considered as having a sort of proprietary right to the game in that region, tramped some 1,234 miles altogether and will have to go again to shoot his deer. Don't say anything to him about it though.

A SELL, BUT NO SALE.—The Yreka Union tells of a sensation caused by a bogus operator in real estate, who called himself Dr. Eley, of New York, and who wanted to buy the Forest House property. He was a cautious capitalist who had been looking all over the coast for a home, and the Forest House just suited him. He was to pay $22,500 for it, and proposed to spend $15,000 more in improving the place. He also had 200 head of fine blooded cattle roaming over the wild ranges of the far-off Hudson, and would bring them out as soon as he had possession of the property. On Thursday, says the Union, he came to town with Short and set Squire Steele to work hunting up the records and making an abstract of title preparatory to drawing up the deeds, etc., and then returned to the Forest House. He together with Messrs. Knights and Short were to come in on Friday morning to Steele's office. He to pay the money and they to sign the deeds, etc. He and Short came in first and while waiting for Mr. and Mrs. Knights, Mr. Steele said he would step up to the telegraph office and be back in a few minutes, leaving Dr. Eley (S) and Short alone. The Dr. told Short that he would step over to the drug store for a few minutes and went out. Shortly after all the other parties arrived and then the Dr. was looked after and found—missing and has been missing ever since.

SETTLED AT LAST.—The noted Canyon Road case, which has been dragging through the courts for so long, has been finally decided by the Supreme court. The present suit, one of a long series, was brought by Fink & Gealy, who claimed the road under a contract with the County court, against Willis & Arachans who claimed under a previously acquired title. The plaintiffs asked for a perpetual injunction restraining the defendants from collecting toll and damages. The Circuit court rendered a decree for plaintiffs, and damages amounting to over $7,000. The Supreme court has sustained the decree of the court below as to the injunction, but have modified it in regard to damages.

PAINFUL ACCIDENT.—While coming down a hill on Antelope with a load of lumber last Wednesday morning Charlie Gillette's team ran away and threw him off the wagon, inflicting painful bruises and flesh wounds. Dr. Chitwood dressed his wounds, and he is now doing well.

Scraps of Southern Oregon History.

Conclusion of the Story of the Marauders at the Mouth of Rogue River in the Early Part of the Year 1856.

The march was a quiet one, no firing allowed, and even the muleteers refrained from raising their usual loud and coarse Mexican epithets with which they at other times carressed their mules into a speedier gait. The march was through heavy timber the first few days, across deep dark canyons and up long ridges, continually cheered by the monotonous ooh! ooh! ooh! of the gringos in the tops of the tall fir trees that covered the hills in all directions. Now and then an unruly steer would break out of the band of beef cattle which was driven along for our subsistence, and come tearing along through the timber, followed by one or more of the men having them in charge, when it would be a race, neck and neck, till the steer would suddenly turn and out of sight, and we never knew whether we had the pleasure afterwards of eating a choice steak cut from his shin, bone, or not. How many cattle started with the command only the quartermaster and his assistants knew, but one thing was certain, we got but very little beef to eat. There seemed to be a new regulation adopted in regard to roll call. It was required of all commissioned officers as well as of privates to "fall in" and answer to their names when called by the orderly sergeants, thus promising that commissioned officers were able to desert, thereby making it necessary to place them under the surveillance of the orderly sergeants who would not desert or be absent from their posts.

A first camp was made on a small creek emptying into Rogue river. It was early and the Lieut. Col. called the officers to his bivouac and enjoined upon them the necessity of care in executing the duty which would be called upon to perform. The General had left us on the 13th to join Col. Kelsey at Grave creek, therefore Lieut. Col. Chapman was anxious that nothing should befall us which might bring censure upon him, or disaster upon his command. Lieut. O. listened attentively, and being, at the time, officer of the guard, felt that it was necessary for him to be on the alert, and see that the guards were equally vigilant. Stalking around in all the dignity of a master of the situation and of the guard, he approached one of the camp guards and asked him if he knew how to challenge. The sentinel straightened himself up and in an irritated and sullying tone of voice replied: "Challenge, reckon I do, and if yer want ter fight jest say the word an' I'm yer man."

"You don't understand me sir," and the last word was slightly emphasized. "I mean if, when you are on guard, any person approaches you after night do you know how to stop him and ascertain who he may be?" "Well," replied the guard, "what business is it of yours whether I know or not, if you come foolin' around after dark 'll let you know how 'll stop yer."

This was too much for the promising young Lieut. and he began to rise a little higher when he told the belligerent guard that, "In officer of the guard, sir, and I'll punish you if you make any more such replies and threats."

"Officer of the guard, are yer, why didn't yer say so them, not come like a fool would and begin to ask such questions."

The scene was enjoyed by the few who heard the conversation, but the Lieut. had enough of drilling a raw volunteer with such limited authority as the officers had over their men; for every man felt himself capable and willing to advise on any strategic points, and was pointedly averse to strict obedience to his officers unless he was first informed of the object of the order and it agreed with his own views.

The march was uninterrupted by any notable incidents until camp was made on Peavine mountain, where the battalion lay in camp for several days awaiting orders from Col. Kelsey, and to recruit men and animals. Capt. Mike Bushey was sent down Rogue river on a scout to discover signs of the Indians. He discovered signs, plenty of them, the story of which some pleasant writer for the TRIBUNE told through its columns a few weeks ago. The scout writer owes me an apology for taking that nice little incident away from me; I wanted it to help fill up. I wanted to tell it myself. But there is another quite as satisfactory that he didn't tell, and I shall proceed to incorporate it for fear he takes that also away from me.

Col. Kelsey had started from Grave creek with the Northern Battalion on the 14th and by reason of the shortness of the distance between his point of departure and the Little Meadows on Rogue river, had reached that point by the time the Southern Battalion pitched camp at Peavine mountain. Kelsey's scouts reported to him that the enemy was encamped in force on a large bar on Peavine river opposite the upper end of the Big Meadows, three miles below the Little Meadows. The Col. wishing to crush the power of the Indians at one blow, deemed that the best plan to accomplish that end, would be to order Lieut. Col. Chapman to join him at the Little Meadows with his command, so as to make a combined and irresistible attack upon the enemy's stronghold. But how to get the order to Col. Chapman was a difficult problem to solve. The distance was only twelve miles, but the country, and more especially the trail, between the two camps was patrolled by the ever vigilant enemy. He could not spare men from his command sufficient to fight their way through, as it was by no means certain that with forces divided he would not fall on easy prey to the Indians who seemed to be well versed in all of the movements of the volunteers, while their own were ever obscured from view. The turbulent river lay between the two camps, with no means of crossing it. Col. Chapman had two cañon-boats, to be sure, but his camp was three or four miles from the river on the top of Peavine mountain, and any attempt to call to him would bring down a swarm of savages upon the unlucky caller. The dispatch must be taken by one person, and that person must be well versed in the science of dodging Indians. After a short search for such a man the Col. had the satisfaction to find him in the person of Tom Moore, a young man who had spent the first years of his majority on the Pacific coast, an acrobat, a gold, and grizzly bear and fighting Indian.
