Panning gold on the Molalla. [Portland Standard Jan. 14.] A well-known citizen of Willitsprings came to this city to-day to have some quartz samples, lately found in a ledge along the Molalla river, examined and assayed by Assayer Jenne. In conversation with a reporter he stated that there is some amount of loose gold to be found in the Molalla river, and that a man working with a pan can clean up, without any special effort, from one to two dollars daily. The place where this has been done is about fifty miles from this city, about thirty-five miles south of Oregon City, and some seven to ten miles from Willitsprings. There is already a small number of people there working away with pans, and making the amounts per day mentioned above. Russell brothers, of Willitsprings, have commenced panning in a sluice, and when they have it in running order, expect to make some five or six dollars a day. It is no new or lately-discovered fact that there is gold to be found in the sands of the Molalla, as there has been some working on there for the last twenty years. But every time things get in good running order, some big excitement would break out and work would be discontinued for the time. Some good ledges have also been found along the Molalla, and although one of them has assayed as high as fifty dollars to the ton, nothing has been done in way of development. The man stated that in years gone by the miners would soon the idea of working with the pan and getting but a dollar or two at the result of a day's labor, but now when it is hard to get any kind of work, and when men have to say wood for $1 a day, diggings such as are found along the Molalla would be highly acceptable. He stated that whenever the men could make a dollar or two a day by washing sand along the Clackamas and many other tributary streams. We mention these facts not for the purpose of causing a boom, or mining excitement, but for the information of those numberless idle men now waiting, like Mcawber, for "something to turn up." They could easily go to the place on foot and carry their blankets with them, and if they find they can make what is claimed by our informant, it would be far better for them to thus engage than by relying around the city picking up what odd jobs chance would throw in their way.

Health of Jews. One noticeable feature about Jewish countries in the south is the scarcity of newly made graves after an epidemic of cholera or yellow fever. Statistics show that fewer of them die than any other race from these or kindred diseases. During the cholera scourge in Toulon only two orthodox Jews died of it, while in numbers they equalled fully 20 per cent of the population. Their immunity from disease and the certainty with which they recover when attacked by it, is accounted for by the simplicity of their diet. They are very strict about following the dietary laws prescribed by Moses. Isn't it a little strange that Moses, if he was only a historian, should have possessed knowledge superior to that of the present and best physicians of the present day? He evidently believed in preventing disease rather than curing it. This is what De Heaver's Cure aims to do; it acts directly on the digestive juice of the stomach and both prevents and cures indigestion and Dyspepsia. Free sample bottle at the City Drug Store.
