A special to the "Examiner" from Washington says: A Sunday paper prints the following: "I understand that Senator Fair is in correspondence with his former wife, from whom he was recently divorced, and the prospect is that a reunion of the separated family is only a question of time."

It is understood here that Major-General Schofield will be transferred to the department of the Atlantic, with headquarters at New York. Maj. Gen. There are three divers and forty wreckers engaged at the wreck. There ter range. will be no effort to raise the steamer. The object of their work is to determine exactly the size and condition of the hole in the Oregon's side, and to secure what they can of the cargo.

An excellent point is made by friends of Gladstone for his measure proposing to expend £150,000,000 to buy out the land owners in Ireland. They cite the land owners in Ireland. They cite the gase of the civil war in the United States, and claim it would have been cheaper for the United States to have purchased the slaves before the rebellion than to have incurred the enormous debt that has been heaped up, not counting the awful sacrifice of life.

A Dalles paper says: Almost in every direction there are indications of the city receiving an impetus in its growth during the coming summer. We hear daily of new dwellings being erected and business houses enlarging. Merchants from other cities are looking in this direction for openings for business and in a little while we may expect an increase in our trade. If the anti-Chinese agitation would cool down, so as to promise capital a safe investment, we should feel assured of a prosperous year.

How He Found His Room. [Washington Letter.]

A young fellow from the South, after some office, told me that he had fallen in with a gentleman who was among the first rewarded under the new regime. This gentleman, being of a social turn, at nightfall asked his companion to take a drink. Several times this invitation was repeated, until the jolly fellow thought it time to go home. He had forgotten where he lived exactly, but he knew the street. After vain attempts to locate his boarding house, he remembered there was a butcher-shop opposite his place and that the butcher knew him. After trying numerous shops without success they hit upon the right one. Having found the house and entered with deficulty, the jolly fellow did not recollect his room's number or position. At last he said to his sober companion:

"If you can find a room with a man asleep in his boots on the sofa and an sleep in his boots on the sofa and an At last he said to his sober companion: empty whisky bottle on the table, that's my room. Every Saturday night my room mate takes that recumbent attitude." Search was made and in one of the apartments, sure enough, such a condition of affairs existed. The jolly fellow took up the empty bottle, examined, and dropped it with a sigh. He gazed at the snoring, stupefied man on the sofa, and then flung himself on the bed, boots and all. What a temperance sermon must the blessed Sunday light as it crept into that boozy lair have preached to the two men with swelled heads and aching brains, as they looked at one another.

A Shrewd Yankee.

[Lewiston (Me.) Journal.] "Uncle Stead" is what they called a shrewd old gentleman who used to live in Winthrop, a little way out of the village, up the side of the pond, near Read-field. One of his fellow-citizens was a man named Lovejoy. Uncle Stead met Lovejoy in the village one day and he said to him: "Lovejoy there's a poor woman lives out on the edge of the town that needs some provisions. I'm willing to supply her, but I've sold my horse and have no means of getting the stuff to her. Now, I'll buy her a barrel of flour and a ham and some other supplies if you'll carry them out to her with your Lovejoy said certainly, he would be very glad to do it. Accordingly. Uncle Stead bought a barrel of flour, a ham, a bucket of sugar, etc., and, telling Lovejoy where the woman lived, sent him off on the errand of charity with the good things in his wagon.

Lovejoy easily found the house where the woman lived. He unloaded the goods, puffing like a grampus as he rolled the barrel of flour in, and said to the woman: "Mr. Steadman sent you the provisions. He's a mighty kind-hearted man to send you all these things." "Well. I don't know why he shouldn't send them to me!" exclaimed the woman in surprised accents. "He's my husband." Photographs.
