LATE KEEPING FRUITS.

[Willamette Farmer.] Some discussion has passed through the Oregon press of late as to the keeping of late winter fruits. Owing to the low fieights late apples were received via San Francisco from the Chicago market and sold at Portland. Later a car load was expected to arrive via the Northern Pacific. The point to all this is the important fact that Oregon apples are not plausible reasons for the fact. One is that our fall and winter seasons are so much more temperate and mild that burn, of Albany, was nominated by acclamation.

as to leave only what it can actually The pound pear is a fruit that is far from being justly appreciated. We ocrelish greatly one of these mammoth pears when well baked. They are as tender as a baked Bartlett and as good. Indeed they are a genuine luxury, not one in four that grow them take good care of them to keep them for winteror rather for late spring use. Oregon should ship East a hundred car loads of pound pears every spring and they should bring a good price. We must learn to take care of what we have and make the most of things we possess and grow things successfully. If orchardists will give their views expression in our calumns they will do something towards furthering the best interests in our region and State. Let us have a en the "right of entering a legal protest against a traffic" that is declared to be the "foulest foe to themselves and their question and call out what each one question and call out what each one knows of late keeping varieties. It is very important that this section should improve its opportunities and first we must know what our opportunities are. Features of Washington Life.

Many of the smaller instrumentalities of this city are in very good condition; the schools have been much improved since the war, and some think that the public schools of Washington are as good as any in the country. There is a re-spectable district militia, well maintained. The fire department of the city is as good as can be found anywhere. The hacks and cabs of the town are rather better than can be found anywhere in America, possibly excepting Boston. "I see more varieties of carriages here," writes Gath in the Cincinnati Enquirer, than in city on the globe, perhaps. The patent povements of the own allow carryalls, chariots, herdies, hansoms, bicycles, gigs, tandem, teams and what not. The great old rolling carriage called the landau is not as often seen as formerly. Considerable private equipage is in Washington. With all this show there is a fair democratic conservatism among the new strangers. I heard rather a pretty story not long ago of a Major-General of the British army who came here on a visit from India, and a prominent man, who was not in politics, to whom the stranger brought a letter, put him in his fine carriage and took him every where. The Englishman said one day: "I see that some of these carriages have drivers in livery suits, while yours has not?"

"No, sir,' said the man, "I never put my driver in livery, because I have a little superstition about it. I am a speculator and have my ups and downs, and it occurred to me that some day or other I might die poor and that my son might have to drive one of these carriages; and I think I would not like to see him in that kind of livery uniform.

"The Englishman, it is said, took his acquaintance warmly by the hand and said that he had been looking in America ever since he had landed in San Francisco for an American, but up to that time he had seen nothing but Englishmen in the country.

CYCLONES AT THE EAST.

Terribly destructive storms occured in the states of Mannesota. lowa and Wisconsin and a portion of Dakota last week. The greatest damage was done by a cyclone which demolished the villages of St. Cloud, Sauk Rapids and Rice's station, Minnesota, on Wednesday afternoon. In the track of the storm a scene of utter desolation and destruction is presented. Over a hundred people were killed in and near the three villages mentioned. The following particulars are taken from the press dispatches:
The cyclone began about 4 o'lock, in the basin of the Masonic cemetry at St.

Cloud, forming a whirlwind about 1000 feet in diameter. It took about every tree in the circle from the ground, or twisted it off at the trunk. Great stones chase for $1,000,000 a large piece of were turned over and carried along with the wind. The cyclone moved slowly an exchange to cost not less than $2,be kept in cellars or houses constructed for the purpose and made especially to withstand the severe winters. If good because in the cyclone moved slowly along in a northe-sternly direction, wrecking the Catholic chapel and several houses. In its course across the prairie and adjoining towns it completely demoralized John Schwartz's large brick house, and scattered tifty or more smaller frame houses, like so many feathers. In most places nothing was left to mark the site of the dwellings but cellars. The praries were strewn with timbers, furniture and clothing. The freight depot of the Manitoba was a total wreck. Numerous cars loaded with freight were blown | that when that is expended a recommen half a mile, and rails were wrenched from the track. esidence, killing several horses. It crossed the Mississippi at the Sauk Rapids wagon bridge, which it demolished. It there widened to 6000 feet, and leveled Stanton's grist mill. From there it swept through the center of the town, taking the business part of it, including the court house, hotel, public school and every important business building in town, except a wooden store. The village is virtually wiped out, four-fifths of the buildings being leveled.

Rice's Station, Benton county, demolishing the village and killing or injuring nearly the entire population. Dispatches were at once sent to the Mayors of Minneapolis and St. Paul and to the governor of the state, calling for help for the sufferers. Physicians and nurses were dispatched at once to the scenes of destruction, and money and provision were sent as soon as possible. Gov. An Ungrateful Man.

Correspondent Philadelphia Record. I met the other day an old friend of President Cleveland, who lives in Opeida county, near the little village that was once the home of the Clevelands. This gentleman was complaining that Mr. Cleveland, unlike Conkling and Seymour (also Onieda county men), had ignored his friends while Governor and absolutely refused to recgnize them since he be-

I sat in the Syracuse Convention that year as a substitute to make the speech placing another candidate for Governor in nomination, and heard ex-Congressman Dan Lockwood make the speech nominating Cleveland, and a good speech it was. Lockwood has had the cold shoulder from Cleveland ever since. Judge Brown of Oneida bolted from the rest of his delegation and seconded Cleveland's nomination. He has told me since that he has received no thanks for it, and and that Cleveland had refused every favor that he asked. Hubert O. Thompson, who engineered the nomination at Chicago in spite of the protests of a majority of the New York delegation, has experienced a similar fate. Only Manning has survived, and he went in for Erastus Corning for Governor in 1881, though he came in on Cleveland's side at Chicago. Lockwood and his friends felt bitterly towards the kitchen Cabinet that ran things at Albany, but Lamont, Manning and Apgar had the Presidental ear, and there was no help for it. McCane, Lockwood and Brown were always bowed politely out of the Gubernatorial presence."

A Short Term in Congress. [Correspondence Chicago Tribune.]

Stories about Gen. A. Sheridan, of Gotham. Gov. Foster told one that quite took the cake. Sheridan ran for ongress during the closing days of his career in Louisanna. He was counted out, after the prevailing southern custom at that day and since. But he came up to Washington relying on a republican house to give him his seat. It was during the temporizing period of republican gressional nomination. statesmanship, when the southern question was handled with gloves, and it was Europe is to receive the visit of an a vote was reached on Sherian's case. He was voted in, which gave him two years' salary. The papers were certified so that he took his seat about six hours before adjournment. This is probably the shortest term any man ever served in congress. Some years afterward Sheridan was walking up Broadway with Gov-Foster, both having happened here at the same time, when Alexander Mitchell, of Milwaukee, passed by and bowed. "Who is that man?" asked Sheridan of Foster. The governor told him, whereupon Sheridan rejoined. "O, Hades, ves: I served in congress with him." It Cured Him.
