The boom in mining stocks at San Francisco set New York wild also last week. A dispatch of Dec. 3d says: The excitement in the mining exchange in Broadway yesterday beat anything of the kind ever before witnessed, even in that excitable place. The floor was densely packed by an eager crowd bidding for Comstocks with an eagerness that could not be surpassed even in San Francisco in former years, Leading brokers professed to have private advices from Virginia City, as well as from San Francisco, of a charter to justify the belief that rich ore had been struck in other mines besides the Consolidated Virginia, but it was noticed that they were careful to keep these private advices to themselves. The outside public, as if taking it for granted that there was good news, gave orders to buy right and left, with Sutro Tunnel a favorite card for the time being. A month ago it could have been bought for ten cents. Today it was rushed up to fifty-seven cents, in transactions that ran up to a quarter of a million shares. Brokers at the regular stock exchange, as well as at the mining board, occasionally took chances in the game, and for a while the railway list was neglected. Consolidated California & Virginia, which sold up to $43, was kicked about the board last summer at $1 per share. How long the infl tion is to go on de pends on the question whether ere has
